

FIGURES

1.1	‘The Water Sprite’ (‘Nøkken’), a fantastic creature from Norwegian folklore peeking out of a dark lake, by the artist Theodor Kittelsen in 1904. (Creative Commons, Public domain)	6
2.1	Liljan Werner at the edge of the Lake of the Dead . (Screenshot)	28
2.2	Television producer Gunnar contemplates the dead body in the lake, while Lasse, left, and Per watch in the background. (Screenshot from Dark Woods)	30
3.1	Jannicke slumping in the snow, having become the exhausted final girl of the first true Norwegian slasher story. (Screenshot from Cold Prey)	40
3.2	Ingunn in the terrible place, wounded, doomed and desperate. (Screenshot from Cold Prey)	43
3.3	The Mountain Man, Jannicke’s slasher film nemesis and a transnational icon of horror. (Screenshot from Cold Prey)	45
4.1	Jannicke fixes her eyes on the mountains in the distance, resolving to end the terror of the Mountain Man at whatever cost to herself. (Screenshot from Cold Prey II)	61
5.1	John sits down opposite Kim, on the surreal stage where Norway’s first modern psychological horror film reaches its terrible climax. (Screenshot from Next Door)	79
6.1	Anna and Helge communicate with the dead via baby monitor. (Screenshot from The Monitor)	88

6.2	The empty windows of suburban Oslo stare out at Anna as she investigates the source of sounds on her baby alarm. (Screenshot from The Monitor)	90
6.3	Thelma crawls from the lake and regurgitates a blackbird, shortly after her father spontaneously combusts and dies in the cold water. (Screenshot from Thelma)	95
6.4	Ben and Anna's trial face-off in the woods in Eskil Vogt's supernatural thriller, foreshadowing the final showdown. (Screenshot from The Innocents)	100
7.1	Norway's biggest secret, quite literally, is revealed to be the Jötunn troll, itself a mountain in the mountains of Dovre. (Screenshot from Troll Hunter)	109
7.2	Hans the troll hunter, underplayed by comedian Otto Jespersen. (Screenshot from Troll Hunter)	110
7.3	'The troll that ponders how old it is' ('Trollet som grunner på hvor gammelt det er'), by artist Theodor Kittelsen in 1911, is one of the significant templates for the modern visualisation of trolls. (Public domain)	111
7.4	A Nazi zombie emerges from the Arctic snow. (Screenshot from Dead Snow)	115
7.5	Feeding on fossil fuel, in a rare socio-political satire depicting Norwegians as helpless oil junkies. (Screenshot from Dark Souls)	118
7.6	It could have been a Hollywood dinosaur, but it is the CGI Midgard Serpent of Norse mythology. (Screenshot from Ragnarok)	121
8.1	The contemporary Norwegian gothic castle. (Screenshot from Dark Woods 2)	126
8.2	Lillian and her twin brother ponder their separation in a boat on the lake, in the film's traumatising past event. (Screenshot from Lake of Death)	140