

PREFACE AND ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Numerous people have helped and advised me during the long gestation of this book. I would like to thank, first of all, the extraordinary team of lawyers who led the Mayekiso defence – especially Advocate David Soggott, and attorneys Norman Manoim and Amanda Armstrong. Without their meticulous work and their construction of a sociologically and historically sensitive defence case, the story of the Alexandra rebellion would never have been told. I was privileged, also, to have been allowed to interview most of the Mayekiso accused during the course of their trial (and afterwards) and would like to thank them for their openness towards me and for the inspiring example they set. The firm Cheadle, Thompson and Haysom was generous with its time and providing me access to all of their documentation. I would also like to thank attorneys Priscilla Jana and Associates for their help in giving me access to materials relating to the Zwane trial, Advocate Norman Kades for discussing the trial with me, and Ashwell Zwane in particular for his time and memories. Members of the Truth Commission, particularly Hugh Lewin and Faizal Randera, kindly invited me to listen to the Alexandra hearings and they and the other commissioners at work in Alexandra were sources of great insight. The late Mr S. S. Modise helped me to understand more about early Alexandra.

Various sources of funding and time were made available to me through the Oxford-based Ernest Oppenheimer Fund and the University of the Witwatersrand. Lincoln College hosted me for two spells in Oxford, where a great deal of writing was achieved. I would also like to thank the now-vanished Institute for Advanced Social Research at Wits for providing me with writing space and research and intellectual support at my home university.

I obtained research and other assistance from a variety of people, all of whom I thank for their meticulousness and dedication – especially Kate Couzens, Nathaniel Ndala, Celeste Mann, Gareth van Onselen, Jessica van Onselen and Etienne Naude. Many friends and colleagues helped, supported and encouraged me, and gave of their time to comment on parts of this manuscript as it evolved. I would like to thank Charles Crothers and Darlene Miller for their thoughtful views; Colin Murray for the time he has spent on the manuscript; Keith Beavon, Phil Bonner, Jim Campbell, Jacklyn Cock, Tim Couzens, Peter Delius, Leah Gilbert, Deborah James, Tom Lodge, Patrick Pearson, Deborah Posel, Liz Walker and Eddie Webster for their consistent interest, helpfulness and insight; Gavin Williams for his sociological imagination and generosity of spirit; Barbara Trapido for the lodestar of creativity that she provides; and Stanley Trapido for his friendship and intellectual brilliance.

Without the help and inspiration of my immediate and extended family, I could not have written this book. Few of them believed it would ever be finished, but they carried on encouraging me anyway. Gareth, Jessica and Matthew have had to grow into adulthood alongside an often distracted and sometimes absent parent and have each in their own way provided me with love and laughter. My husband, Charles van Onselen – a man of unwavering integrity – has sustained me throughout. This book is dedicated to my parents, whose love and wisdom knew no equal.

‘Alexandra’ by Wally Serote, in Michael Chapman (ed.), A Century of South African Poetry (Johannesburg: Ad Donker, 1981), is reproduced by permission of the publishers.