

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The initial fieldwork on which this book is based, from 1968 to 1970, was supported by the Wenner-Gren Foundation and by the University of California at Los Angeles. Research grants from the University of London and the Economic and Social Research Council have helped to finance subsequent visits. Periods of writing time were funded by the Maison des Sciences de l'Homme, the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales, the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, and by University College London. To all these organisations, I express my gratitude. I would also like to thank Basil Blackwell (Publisher) Ltd for permission to reprint passages from my chapter in Asian and African Systems of Slavery (ed. James Watson, 1980).

This book is about, and for, the residents of the Department of the Mbere; I thank the large number of them who have helped me in my attempts to understand their society. I trust that although some will find what I have written contentious, they will accept that I have done so in the spirit of constructive enquiry. I would also like to thank the Cameroon Government's Ministry of Higher Education and Research, the various sub-prefects and prefects of the Meiganga Arrondissement and the Department of the Mbere, as well as the numerous canton chiefs, village headmen and ardo'en, who have facilitated my research over the years. Despite the many negative remarks that one reads nowadays about post-colonial African political regimes, let it be recorded that I have experienced nothing but helpful responses from these authorities throughout my stays in Cameroon.

Over the years, I have benefited greatly from the intellectual stimulation and advice of the staff and students of the Anthropology Department at University College London. In particular, I must mention my West Africanist colleagues Murray Last, Paul Richards, Mike Rowlands, Barrie Sharpe and the late M. G. Smith. At the risk of offending the numerous other people who have contributed materially and intellectually to this project, I also want to thank Elisabeth Copet-Rougier, Henri Bocquené, the late Ndoudi Oumarou, Phil and Cece Noss, Thomas Christensen, Adzia Denis, Abbo

Secrétaire, Eldridge Mohammadou, Peter Geschiere and the other anonymous reader of this manuscript. Of course, none of these helpful individuals bears any responsibility for the faults of which this work, no doubt, has its full share.

Finally, I want to thank my children, Emily and Matthew, who have patiently lived with this project, both in London and in Cameroon, for all their years to date.

FRONTISPIECE: The late Ardo Seini, a Jafun leader from the Yarimbang area.