

The Fragility of Concern for Others

Contemporary Continental Ethics

Series editors: Bryan Lueck, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville and Lucian Stone, University of North Dakota

Normative Ethics from a Continental Perspective

The books in this series address pressing and difficult ethical questions from the perspective of Continental philosophy. They offer new ways of thinking about moral phenomena and raise challenging questions that have not been considered before. The series includes work in the field of normative ethics, both theoretical and applied. Space is also given to treatments of social, political and aesthetic questions that intersect with ethical considerations.
