

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people assisted me in the process of writing this ethnography. I would like to thank Richard Werbner who supervised with enthusiasm, humour and care the thesis on which this account is based. A three-month fellowship at the International Centre for Contemporary Cultural Research at Manchester University gave me the opportunity to begin revisions of the thesis. I am grateful also to Sara Delamont for advice on the ethnography of schooling. Jeanette Edwards, Harri Englund, James Ferguson, Sarah Green, Suzette Heald, Hugo Hinfelaar, Henrietta Moore, Pnina Werbner and Paul Willis all kindly read and constructively commented on earlier drafts. Judith Okely, who has been an inspirational teacher since I first encountered Social Anthropology at undergraduate level, offered helpful insights on parts of the text. Hector Blackhurst at John Rylands Library went well beyond the call of duty to help me in my search for Mudimbe's autobiography. The sensitive reading of IAI readers and editors has helped to make this a better book than it would otherwise have been.

Members of my family, my mother Lois, my sisters Susan, Maureen and Catherine and their partners George, Bill and Alex constantly provided me with all manner of encouragement and support. Catherine, in particular, worked tirelessly in assisting me in the various rounds of typing and retyping the original thesis and book manuscript. Marian Brothers of several Provinces assisted me at all stages of my fieldwork. The Brothers, workers, students and teachers at St Antony's, past and present, made me welcome and assisted me in my endeavours in ways too numerous to mention. Tom Scalway, the monks of Mount St Benedict in Trinidad, the monks of Pluscarden Abbey in Scotland, Patrick and Patricia Mwila in Lusaka, and Reuben and Annie Mondoka in Kalulushi each in very different ways provided me with environments conducive to rewriting and much practical assistance.
