

Contents

Translator's Foreword	ix
Acknowledgements	xiii
Preface	xiv
List of Abbreviations	xv
Introduction: The Problems of the Deleuzian Conception of Philosophy	1
Part I Theory of Elements
I Theory of the Concept	13
1. Its Function	13
A. The Virtual	14
B. Consistency	20
C. Differences from Criticism	21
i. An Expanded Empiricism	21
ii. From the Critical Philosophy to a Metaphilosophical Criticism	24
iii. Constitution and Reconstitution	26
D. Philosophy, Science, and Art	29
Conclusion	38
2. The Concept's Ontological Status	39
3. Objectivity	44
4. Concept and Event	50
5. From Representation to Counter-Effectuation	55
6. The Concept's Singularity	59
7. Multiplicity (or Endoconsistency)	62
8. The Heterogeneity of Components	63
9. The Concept's Mutability or Historicity	66
10. Mobility	68
11. The Concept's Exoconsistency, or Philosophy's Systematicity	70

CONTENTS

12.	Concepts, Functions, Affects	79
	Conclusion	85
II	The Plane of Immanence	100
1.	Philosophy's Inauguration	100
A.	Image of Thought and Matter of Being	100
B.	Plane of Immanence and Concepts	102
C.	Philosophy's Commencement and Philosophy's Inauguration	103
	Conclusion	106
2.	Histories of Philosophy	107
A.	The History of Philosophy Is Not a Long Discussion	107
B.	The Time of Philosophy	109
C.	History of Philosophy and Philosophy of History	112
D.	One or Several Planes of Immanence?	116
E.	History of Philosophy and Metahistory of Philosophy	119
	Conclusion	127
III	Conceptual Personae	133
1.	The Agent of Philosophical Enunciation	133
2.	Distinction between the Conceptual Persona and the Literary Character	135
3.	Passage from the Conceptual Persona to the Literary Character	137
	Conclusion	139
Part II Theory of Creation
IV	Theory of Method	149
1.	The Problem of Method	149
2.	The Limits of Interpretation	151
3.	The Deleuzian Method	155
4.	A Bergsonian Method?	165
A.	Intuition as Method	165
B.	Space and Time	169
C.	The Empirical and the Transcendental	172
	Conclusion	175

Contents

V	The History of Philosophy	181
	1. The Problem of the History of Philosophy	181
	2. Difference and Repetition	184
	A. The Art of the Portrait	184
	B. Philosophical Collage	185
	C. Theatre of Philosophy	188
	3. Fidelity and Efficacy	190
	A. Falsification and Fictionalisation	190
	B. The Status of Objectivity	191
	C. A Classical Historiography	192
	D. The Two Histories and the Two Rules of Method	195
	Conclusion	197
VI	Philosophical Discourse	201
	1. Philosophy of Language and Philosophy of Literary Art	201
	A. The Postulates of Linguistics	201
	B. Literature as Language within Language	207
	C. Political Functions of Literature	209
	2. Philosophy as a Branch of Literature	212
	3. General Theory of Philosophical Discourse	215
	A. The Voice of Cutting-out	215
	B. The Name of the Concept	216
	C. The Enunciative Instance	220
	D. Case Analysis: Literary Genres in Nietzsche and Spinoza	221
	4. Deleuzian Discourse	224
	A. Solutions to the General Problems of Philosophical Discourse	224
	i. The Names of the Concept	224
	ii. The Enunciative Instance	226
	B. Particular Problems and Solutions in Deleuzian Discourse	228
	i. Expressing the Virtual	228
	ii. Expressing the Event	232
	iii. Expression of Multiplicity	235
	Conclusion	237

CONTENTS

Part III The Philosophical Image of Thought

Introduction	247
VII The Dogmatic Image and the New Image of Thought	253
1. Postulate of Commencement: The Principle of Cogitatio Natura Universalis	253
2. Postulate of the Ideal: Common Sense; Postulate of the Model: Recognition	254
3. Postulate of the Element: Representation	255
4. That Which Forces Thinking	256
5. From the Collaboration to the Concatenation of the Faculties	256
6. 'The Transcendental Landscape Comes to Life'	263
7. Postulate of the Negative: Error	265
8. Foolishness	265
9. Postulate of the Condition: The Problem and Sense; Postulate of the Consequence: The Solution and the True	266
10. The Genesis of Truth	268
11. Postulate of the Result: Knowledge	273
12. Apprenticeship and Culture	273
Conclusion	274
VIII Philosophical Thought	280
1. Sign and Idea	280
2. The New Image of Method	283
A. Creation of Concepts and Construction of Problems	283
B. Method and Culture	284
Conclusion: The Identity of Philosophy Faced with the Singularity of Philosophies	289
Bibliography	300
Index	307