

CONTENTS

---

|                                                                                                            |       |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| List of Figures                                                                                            | vii   |
| Acknowledgements                                                                                           | ix    |
| Notes on Contributors                                                                                      | xi    |
| Traditions in World Cinema                                                                                 | xv    |
| Introduction: Liminality and the Boundaries of Film Noir                                               | 1 |
| Elyce Rae Helford and Christopher Weedman                                                           |       |
| PART I. EXPOSING CULTURAL ANXIETIES                                                             |       |
| 1. The Despair of the Noir Generation: Wajda's Ashes and Diamonds                                   | 11    |
| Alan Woolfolk                                                                                       |       |
| 2. The Fleap Being Neither Flea nor Fly: Ida Lupino's Interrogations of Female Trauma in Never Fear | 23    |
| Julie Grossman                                                                                      |       |
| 3. Running Aimlessly: Camino Cortado and Autarkic Spain                                             | 37    |
| Fernando Gabriel Pagnoni Berns                                                                      |       |
| 4. Race and the Noir Western: Navigating The Walking Hills                                          | 51    |
| Elyce Rae Helford                                                                                   |       |

PART II. RECONCEPTUALISING NATIONAL CINEMAS

5. 'My Mama Done Tol' Me': Jewish Émigré Noir, Hybridity,
and Black-Jewish Relations in Blues in the Night 69
Vincent Brook
6. Expressionism, Existentialism, and Socialism in Scars of the Past 87
Milan Hain
7. The Deadly Seduction of a Rake: British Costume Melodrama, Noir, and the 'Othered' Woman in The Gypsy and the Gentleman 105
Christopher Weedman
8. Argentine Gothic-Noir Fusion in The Black Vampire 131
Oswaldo Di Paolo Harrison and Nadina Olmedo

PART III. AESTHETICS AND ANTECEDENTS

9. A 'Feeling of Suspension': Tradition and Modernity in
La Pointe Courte 147
Alicia Byrnes
10. Dostoyevsky '58: Richard Brooks's Brothers Karamazov as Baroque Noir 161
Matthew Sorrento
11. Men in Black: I Confess, the Hitchcock Noir, and the American Gothic 180
David Greven
- Selected Bibliography 195
- Index 207