

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I have benefited from the generosity of many individuals and institutions in the research and writing process for this book. The research was funded by an Australian Research Council Discovery Grant (DP120100791), for 2012–2014, a school grant from the School of Humanities and Languages, University of New South Wales, and a small grant from the United States Studies Centre, University of Sydney. Visiting fellowships at the Southeast Asian Studies Centre at the University of Freiburg (2013) and the Center for Asian Studies, Lund University, gave me the opportunity to write, present early drafts to colleagues, and receive feedback. I am grateful to Monica Lindberg Falk for arranging my fellowship at Lund University that enabled me to write the chapter on Filipino migrants and the homeland and to Judith Schlehe and Jürgen Rüland for giving me written comments on the chapter on migrants as historians and for publishing it in their working paper series. I appreciate Jonathan Okamura, Maruja M. B. Asis, and Roli Talampas for sharing their sources with me and for many helpful discussions on the topics of Filipino migration. I thank Eureka Henrich for important feedback for the Australian case study that formed part of chapter 6, published in Historians, History and the Immigration Debate: Going Back to Where We Came From, edited by Eureka Henrich and Julian M. Simpson (Palgrave Macmillan, 2019).

Most of the archives I used were personal papers or collections. For their generosity in sharing their private collections, I acknowledge Deborah Wall, Rosa Droescher, Joan Dicka, Cecilia Silva, Amefil Agbayani, Clement Bautista (Operation Manong [OM] archives), Dee Diden Hunt (Kasama), Mona Lisa Yuchengco (Philippine International Aid [AID] archives), Pio de Cano Jr., Mao and Ophée de Vera, Cora Francisco, Estrella “Lilia” McKinnon, and Rogelia Pe-Pua. Nicki Saroca invited me to her home in Newcastle, New South Wales, Australia so that I could avail of her excellent personal archive of Filipinos in Australia, and Joan Dicka also welcomed me into her home in Adelaide. Sonia Soosot Nisa Zerrudo gave me privileged access to the written journals of the members of Lakbay Dangal in Hong Kong. For providing much needed rare material on migrant life stories I am indebted to Vivienne Angeles, Nicole

Constable, Charito Basa, Luz Campos Mesenas (for copies of OFW Pinoy Star magazine [Singapore]), and to Roli Talampas, who lent me his hard-copy issues of Tinig ng Marino.

I appreciate the help of Dorothy Cordova and the late Fred Cordova, founders of the Filipino American National Historical Society (FANHS), for welcoming me in the National Pinoy Archives and for arranging interviews with Filipino Americans. I thank the late Robert Santos for sharing his story with me and for showing me around the International District in Seattle. I am indebted to the late Dawn Mabalon—the premier historian of Filipinos in Stockton, California, for personally giving me a tour of Filipinos in Stockton, for sharing her photo archive with me, and for introducing me to the FANHS-Stockton group. Terri Torres and Linda Claramo past president and president of FANHS-Stockton regularly sent me their newsletters by email since I joined their organization in 2013 and responded to my queries for more information. I want to extend a very special thank you to those who helped me with organizing interviews: Maruja M. B. Asis, Mona Lisa Yuchengco, Joy and Arnel Baradas, Charito Basa, Verma Villanueva, Precy Villanueva, Sally Rousset, Maya Jezewski, Benjie de Ubago, Melinda Kerkvliet, Amefil Agbayani, Clement Bautista, Jacinta Carlos, Marian Laarni Silva, Rowel Valdez Tugas, John Nobelo Reyes, Masaaki Satake, Cecilia Silva, Cedia Lopez Vargas, Marianna Lopez Vargas, Andrea Rubio, Luz and Clem Mesenas, Gemma Nemenzo, Jonathan Okamura, Lita Patricio, Nina “Cute” Rotelo, Gilda Malaluan, Cristina Santos, Edna Aquino, Emil de Guzman, Sonia Soosot Nisa Zerrudo, Alpha Grace Vicente, Dee Dican Hunt, and the Philippine Consulate General in Milan. MC Canlas took me on a personalized Filipino American tour of San Francisco, Ramon Virata took me to the PIA archives in San Francisco, Lisa Monteroso Mayor welcomed me in the PinoyWISE (Worldwide Initiative for Investment Savings and Entrepreneurship) financial literacy seminar in Singapore in 2016, and Mai Añonuevo arranged my participation in the PinoyWISE financial literacy seminar in Malolos, Bulacan province, in 2019. Precy Villanueva and Marian Laarni Silva arranged my participation at the debut celebrations in Padova in 2018, and Verma Villanueva took me to Andrew Templo Avecilla’s fiftieth birthday in 2015 also in Padova.

I have had the good fortune to be able to enlist the aid of several excellent librarians in the task of hunting for sources: Susi Yamaguchi and Anna Rutkowska, University of New South Wales Outreach librarians, Mitchell Yangson, librarian, Filipino American Center, San Francisco Public Library, Mercy Servida of the Lopez Museum and Library, Metro-Manila, who provided consistent outstanding service in pursuit of rare materials, and Barbara Quek from the National Library of Singapore.

Anita Navalta Bautista not only shared her life story with me as a second-generation Filipina American, she also arranged interviews with first-generation Filipino Americans in Stockton, took me to the Stockton cemetery and the Daguhoy Lodge, and sent me valuable sources, including photographs. Elena Mangahas invited me to come as a guest of the Filipina Women's Network to the PIA fundraising event, took me on the Filipino American tour of Stockton, posted to me her copies of Filipinas magazine, and arranged several interviews in San Francisco and Manila. Maruja M. B. Asis arranged interviews for me in Santa Rosa, Laguna, and accompanied me there for fieldwork.

For corrections to early drafts of this book, I thank Mao de Vera, Mona Lisa Yuchengco, Anita Navalta Bautista, M C Canlas, Clement Bautista, Amefil Agbayani, and Debbie Wall. For his invaluable help in Manila, taking me to archives and interviews, I thank Jun Dulay. Raina Ann Bernardez and Esther Ann S. Gov transcribed most of the interviews for this book. And lastly, I thank Martyn Lyons, who translated all the Italian material for me, accompanied me to Rome, Rotterdam, Hong Kong, and Padova, and gave me feedback and support in the writing process. To all those who gave me their valuable time and to all the interviewees, maraming salamat po.
