To Claire and Paul—two global citizens in the making—and to all “cosmopolitan bricoleurs of resistance,” who remake the world through their stories

Watashi wa wasurenai [I will not forget]

While I wash my face
While I walk on a street corner
I continue living with the Constitution today
My thoughts on hope for peace, equality, and justice
In the spring night
And in the summer morning
I will not forget

While I cut vegetables
While I write letters
I continue living with the Constitution today
My feelings for peace, equality, and justice
In the fall night
And in the winter morning
I will not forget

Our sky spreads far and wide
Let our voice spread over the world
Our feelings for peace, equality, and justice
Our voice coming from a small town far away

*Words by Sugi Goro
Music by Ichino Munehiko
Translation by Hara Hiroko*
