

ILLUSTRATIONS

Map

- 0.1 Military frontier settlements (tunken 屯墾) in Asia in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. xviii

Figures

- 0.1 The long-abandoned city of Jiaohe in Xinjiang. xiii
- 1.1 Illustration of an Archimedean screw, one of the new technologies from the West which the Ming official Xu Guangqi tried to promote in his work. 32
- 1.2 Illustration and description of trees planted by army of Zuo Zongtang along roadways in Gansu province. 33
- 1.3 Letter from William Clark to his father. In the nineteenth century, young Americans looked to Europe for models of higher education. 41
- 2.1 Capron advocated for the mechanization of farming on Hokkaido. Decades later Japanese colonial administrators in Manchuria still referred to a “Capron plan.” 60

- 2.2 Inner colonization plans in East Prussia, 1886–1920. 67
- 2.3 Illustration from the 1847 work Seimi Kaiso 舍密開宗 by Udagawa Yōan (1798–1846). 76
- 2.4 City map included in the Dali County Gazetteer (Zhang Peijue and Zhou Zongluo, eds., Dali xian zhi gao 大理縣志稿, 1917). The Agricultural and Forestry Experimental Zone is prominently featured in the top left corner of the map. 79
- 2.5 From the Journal of Agriculture (Nongxue bao 農學報), which included an esoteric range of articles on new farming techniques and crops from the West from 1897. 81
- 5.1 A map of the locations of the RF-sponsored crop programs in China and their relocation during the war. 154
- 5.2 Officers before their departure for the Xing An Tunken Zone and their encampment en route. 165
- 5.3 Plans for a livestock husbandry laboratory in the Suiyuan Tunken Zone. 171
- 5.4 Plans for irrigation networks in the Suiyuan Tunken Zone. 171
- 5.5 One of the New Villages designed for the Suiyuan Tunken Zone. 173
- 6.1 Schematic of living quarters from the progress report for the Guizhou Six Dragons Tunken Bureau, 1943. 202
- 6.2 The front cover of the report on progress at the Guizhou Six Dragons Tunken Experimental Zone, 1943. 203