

Contents

Foreword
Max D. Lederer Jr.	vii
Introduction
G. Kurt Piehler and Ingo Tauschweizer	1
1. Learning and Adapting: The American Media and the “Phony War,” September 1939–April 1940
Steven Casey	15
2. Helen Kirkpatrick’s Reporting to Undercut Irish Neutrality Policy, 1939–1942
Karen Garner	34
3. Miss Bonney Reporting from the Arctic Front
Henry Oinas-Kukkonen	55
4. Reporting from the Bureaus: The Lesser-Known World War II Correspondents
Kendall Cosley	85
5. Two African American Journalists Confront World War II: Perspectives on Nationalism, Racism, and Identity
Larry A. Greene and Alan Delozier	107
6. Bylines and Bayonets: How United States Marine Corps Combat Correspondents in World War II Blended Journalism and Public Relations
Douglass K. Daniel	132

7. Reporting Reconnaissance to the Public: A Comparative Analysis of Canadian and American Strategies	159
Victoria Sotvedt
8. Outstanding and Conspicuous Service: Iris Carpenter, Lee Carson, and Ann Stringer in the European Theater	172
Carolyn M. Edy
9. A “Butcher and Bolt” Force: Commandos, Rangers, and Newspaper Dramatics in World War II	193
James Austin Sandy
10. “A Major Readjustment”: Omar Bradley’s War against the Stars and Stripes	213
Alexander G. Lovelace
11. After the Shooting Stopped: Justice and Journalism at Nuremberg	234
Nathaniel L. Moir
Acknowledgments	259
List of Contributors	261
Index	265