

Table of contents

Abbreviations used in glosses — x

Abbreviations used in text — xi

List of tables — xii

List of figures and graphs — xiv

Acknowledgements — xv

1 Introduction: History and theories of second language acquisition — 1

- 1.1 Formal/generative approaches — 3
 - 1.1.1 Universal grammar and language acquisition — 3
 - 1.1.2 The parametric approach in second language acquisition — 6
 - 1.1.3 Interface approaches — 9
- 1.2 Processing models — 10
- 1.3 Discourse-pragmatic approaches — 12
- 1.4 The variationist approach — 14
- 1.5 Concluding remarks regarding theoretical approaches to L2 acquisition — 17
- 1.6 Organization of the volume — 18

2 Subjects in Spanish — 20

- 2.1 Overview of subject forms in Spanish — 20
- 2.2 Syntactic properties of Spanish subjects — 23
 - 2.2.1 The Null Subject Parameter — 23
 - 2.2.2 Interpretative constraints — 27
 - 2.2.3 Strong agreement and Spanish subjects — 30
- 2.3 Discourse-pragmatic features and Spanish subject distribution — 32
 - 2.3.1 Focus, topic-continuity and topic-shift — 32
 - 2.3.2 Cohesion, saliency and cognition — 36
- 2.4 Referent features and verbal semantics in Spanish subject distribution — 38
 - 2.4.1 Person, number and verb semantics — 38
 - 2.4.2 Specificity and animacy of referents — 40

2.5	Regional variations of Spanish subjects —	42
2.6	Chapter summary —	44
3	Parametric studies in the acquisition of subject pronouns —	47
3.1	Early research into the L2 acquisition of Spanish subject pronouns —	49
3.2	Research on the acquisition of the Overt Pronoun Constraint (OPC) and Topic/Focus —	61
3.3	Recent studies from a parametric approach: The OPC and naturalistic input —	69
3.4	Conflicting evidence and common findings —	74
4	The syntax-pragmatics interface in the acquisition of subject pronouns —	77
4.1	Cross-linguistic influence in bilinguals and the Unidirectional Hypothesis —	79
4.2	The Unaccusative Hypothesis and word order —	87
4.3	The OPC (again) —	107
4.4	Person and number —	114
4.5	Contributions of findings of the syntax-pragmatic interface model —	117
5	Processing studies and L2 subject pronoun acquisition in Spanish —	120
5.1	Anaphoric resolution in pro-drop languages and the PAH —	122
5.1.1	The PAH in Italian —	122
5.1.2	The PAH in Spanish —	124
5.1.3	The PAH in Spanish and Italian —	131
5.1.4	Summary of effects of the PAH in pro-drop languages —	133
5.2	Anaphoric resolution strategies in bilingual and L2 acquisition (pro-drop and non-pro-drop languages) —	135
5.2.1	Strategies of anaphoric resolution in Italian L2 —	135
5.2.2	Strategies of anaphoric resolution in Italian-English and Italian-Spanish bilinguals —	138
5.3	Strategies of anaphoric resolution in Spanish heritage and L2 speakers —	139
5.3.1	PAH biases in early (heritage) and late (L2) bilingual speakers —	139

5.3.2	PAH biases and discourse structure in L2 learners —	144
5.3.3	Conclusions of anaphoric resolution in bilingual and Spanish L2 speakers —	148
5.4	Chapter summary —	150
6	Discourse-pragmatics approaches in the acquisition of subject expression —	152
6.1	Discourse structure and the acquisition of subject expression —	153
6.2	Cohesion theory and the anaphoric hierarchy —	154
6.2.1	Testing the anaphoric hierarchy and cohesion theory —	157
6.2.2	Native speakers' use of subject forms according to the anaphoric hierarchy —	158
6.2.3	L2 Learners' use of subject forms according to the anaphoric hierarchy —	162
6.2.4	Predictions and universality of the anaphoric hierarchy —	166
6.3	Emphasis, contrast and disambiguation —	168
6.3.1	A longitudinal case study —	169
6.3.2	Quantitative findings —	171
6.3.3	Qualitative findings —	172
6.3.4	Comparing the quantitative and qualitative findings —	177
6.4	Pragmatic constraints of saliency, focus, and pragmatic weight —	178
6.4.1	The rule of salient referent —	178
6.4.2	The rule of switch focus of attention —	180
6.4.3	The rule of contrastive focus —	182
6.4.4	The rule of pragmatic weight —	184
6.4.5	The rule of epistemic parentheticals —	185
6.4.6	Saliency, focus, and pragmatic weight in L2 learners' narrative structure —	187
6.4.7	Results of analysis of pragmatic constraints —	189
6.5	Cognitive status and the Givenness Hierarchy —	192
6.5.1	Cognitive status of type identifiable and referential —	193
6.5.2	Cognitive status of uniquely identifiable —	194
6.5.3	Cognitive status of familiar —	194
6.5.4	Cognitive status of activated —	194
6.5.5	Cognitive status of in focus —	195
6.5.6	A revised hierarchy for Spanish —	196

6.5.7	The revised hierarchy and predicting subject use in L2 learners' narratives —	196
6.5.8	Results of testing the revised hierarchy —	197
6.6	Contributions of findings of the discourse-pragmatics approach —	203
7	A variationist approach to L2 subject pronoun acquisition —	206
7.1	Constraining factors in variationist studies —	209
7.1.1	Linguistic variables —	209
7.1.2	Discourse variables —	216
7.2	Conditioning factors in L2 variationist studies —	222
7.2.1	Linguistic variables in L2 studies —	222
7.2.2	Discourse variables in L2 variation studies —	234
7.3	Chapter summary —	242
8	Summary of findings —	246
8.1	The parametric model —	246
8.1.1	The initial state —	247
8.1.2	Automatic learning of a cluster of properties —	248
8.1.3	Acquisition along a hierarchical/implicational path —	249
8.1.4	The role of input in resetting parameters —	249
8.1.5	Conclusions of findings of the parametric approach —	250
8.2	The syntax-pragmatics interface model —	251
8.2.1	Subject pronoun use constrained by discourse context —	252
8.2.2	Unidirectional transfer —	253
8.2.3	Word order constrained by lexical verb class and focus —	253
8.2.4	Subsequent vs. simultaneous acquisition of syntax and discourse-pragmatic constraints —	254
8.2.5	Why do discourse-pragmatic deficits linger? —	254
8.2.6	Non-uniformity of L2 acquisition —	255
8.2.7	Conclusions of findings of the syntax-pragmatics interface model —	256
8.3	Processing models —	256
8.3.1	Strategies for resolving conflicting cues —	258
8.3.2	Processing at the interface —	259
8.3.3	Mediation between input and universal linguistic properties —	259
8.3.4	Innate or L1 principles —	260
8.3.5	Conclusions of findings of the processing model —	260

8.4	Discourse-pragmatic approach —	261
8.4.1	Discourse constraints/pragmatic rules —	262
8.4.2	Impact of information structure in discourse —	263
8.4.3	Predictions of implicational hierarchies —	264
8.4.4	Universal cognitive abilities vs. language specific principles —	264
8.4.5	Conclusions of findings of the discourse-pragmatics model —	265
8.5	Variationist model —	265
8.5.1	Linguistics contexts/factors and variability affecting subject expression in L2 —	267
8.5.2	Discourse contexts/factors and variability affecting subject expression in L2 —	267
8.5.3	Effects of verbal lexical semantics and variability of subject expression in L2 —	268
8.6	Common findings and concluding remarks —	269
References —		273
Index —		283