

Contents

Martha Sif Karrebæk, Lian Malai Madsen and Janus Spindler Møller

Introduction

Everyday Linguaging: Collaborative research on the language use of children and youth — 1

Martha Sif Karrebæk

Arabs, Arabic and urban languaging: Polycentricity and incipient enregisterment among primary school children in Copenhagen — 19

Liva Hyttel-Sørensen

Gangster talk on the phone – analyses of a mass media parody of a contemporary urban vernacular in Copenhagen and its reception — 49

Andreas Stæhr

Normativity as a social resource in social media practices — 71

Astrid Ag

Rights and wrongs – authority in family interactions — 95

Ulla Lundqvist

Becoming a “smart student”: The emergence and unexpected implications of one child’s social identification — 121

Lamies Nassri

“Well, because we are the One Direction girls” – Popular culture, friendship, and social status in a peer group — 145

Lian Malai Madsen

‘The Diva in the room’ – Rap music, education and discourses on integration — 167

Thomas Rørbeck Nørreby

Ethnic identifications in late modern Copenhagen — 199

Janus Spindler Møller

Discursive reactions to nationalism among adolescents in Copenhagen — 219

VI — Contents

Asif Agha

Growing up bilingual in Copenhagen — 243

Transcription Conventions — 255

References — 257

Index — 275