

Table of Contents

Introduction: A Possible Strangeness: Reading Russian Science Fiction on the Page and the Screen	viii
--	------

Anindita Banerjee

PART ONE

From Utopian Traditions to Revolutionary Dreams	01
--	-----------

The Utopian Tradition of Russian Science Fiction	01
--	----

Darko Suvin

Red Star: Another Look at Aleksandr Bogdanov	30
--	----

Mark B. Adams

Generating Power.....	51
-----------------------	----

Anindita Banerjee

Imagining the Cosmos: Utopians, Mystics, and the Popular Culture of Spaceflight in Revolutionary Russia	79
---	----

Asif A. Siddiqi

PART TWO

Russia’s Roaring Twenties 117

Soviet Science Fiction of the 1920s: Explaining a Literary Genre in its Political and Social Context 117
Dominic Esler

The Plural Self: Zamiatin’s We and the Logic of Synecdoche 147
Eliot Borenstein

Science Fiction of the Domestic: Iakov Protazanov’s Aelita 166
Andrew J. Horton

Eugenics, Rejuvenation, and Bulgakov’s Journey into the Heart of Dogness 178
Yvonne Howell

PART THREE

From Stalin to Sputnik and Beyond 201

Stalinism and the Genesis of Cosmonautics 201
Michael G. Smith

Klushantsev: Russia’s Wizard of Fantastika 214
Lynn Barker and Robert Skotak

Towards the Last Fairy Tale: The Fairy-Tale Paradigm in the Strugatskys' Science Fiction, 1963–72	231
Istvan Csicsery-Ronay Jr
Tarkovsky, Solaris , and Stalker	281
Stephen Dalton

PART FOUR

Futures at the End of Utopia 290

Viktor Pelevin and Literary Postmodernism in Soviet Russia	290
Elana Gomel
The Forces of Kinship: Timur Bekmambetov's Night	306
Watch Cinematic Trilogy
Vlad Strukov
The Antiutopia Factory: The Dystopian Discourse in Russian Literature in the Mid-2000s	328
Aleksandr Chantsev
Index	371