

Contents

Editors' Foreword	1
Adam S. Ferziger, Miri Freud-Kandel, and Steven Bayme
Modern Orthodoxy and the Road Not Taken: A Retrospective View	7
Irving (Yitz) Greenberg
PART ONE
Law and Theology	55
<hr/>
1 History and Halakhah	55
Steven T. Katz
2 Rabbi Yitz Greenberg's Covenantal Theory of Bioethics	67
Alan Jotkowitz
3 Irving Greenberg's Theology of Hybrid Judaism	81
Darren Kleinberg
4 On the Meaning and Significance of Revelation for Orthodox Judaism	96
James Kugel
5 Divine Hiddenness and Human Input: The Potential Contribution of a Postmodern View of Revelation to Yitz Greenberg's Holocaust Theology	107
Tamar Ross
6 Modern Orthodoxy and Religious Truth	129
Marc B. Shapiro
7 On Revelation, Heresy, and Mesorah—from Louis Jacobs to the TheTorah.com	146
Miri Freud-Kandel

PART TWO

Past and Present	172
8 What Is “Modern” in Modern Orthodoxy? Alan Brill	172
9 Can Modern Orthodoxy Survive? Jack Wertheimer	193
10 Where Have All the Rabbis Gone? The Changing Character of the Orthodox Rabbinate and its Causes Samuel C. Heilman	211
11 Modern Orthodox Responses to the Liberalization of Sexual Mores Sylvia Barack Fishman	224
12 “The Road Not Taken” and “The One Less Traveled”: The Greenberg–Lichtenstein Exchange and Contemporary Orthodoxy Adam S. Ferziger	254
Editors and Contributors	289
Index	293