

Acknowledgments

WITH EACH BOOK I WRITE, THE ACKNOWLEDGMENTS LIST gets lengthier and lengthier. Many thanks to my good friend, font of knowledge, and confirmation sponsor John F. Fox. Also, I am grateful to the individuals, institutions, and publications that have given me opportunities to share my research. Many colleagues have endured my pontification as I tested out ideas. Special thanks to Rob, Deborah, J.D., Brian M., Jenny, Fred, “Molly,” Nick, and Dan. Additionally, I am grateful to Richard, with whom I would have been presenting in Hawaii had it not been for the pandemic.

I am in debt to friends who have shown me such hospitality—essential to an author decompressing—over the years. KT and Pat, who have allowed me to occupy their home with an invading army of revelers to celebrate the launch of each new book (and who have regularly been quite generous with their liquor cabinet). Connie and Joe, Joe, and Jim, you are all amazing. Many thanks to those who have shared holidays and dinner tables with me—Sylvia and Garry, BZ and George, and Dennis and Pam. Also, I am grateful to my larger family—Suzanne, Katherine and Bob, Matthew, Kay Frances, Kathleen, KdJ (for whom I invented a cocktail), Tom, and so many others—at Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Washington, DC. I must, as always, tip my hat (and my Manhattan) to the inimitable Judith Chase Gilbert.

Finally, I want to acknowledge Keith and Judy for their warm welcome and kindness.
