

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

THIS BOOK, WHOSE German version appeared in 2016, tries to develop fresh perspectives on how principal forms of mediality and materiality, transmission and transference were performed and negotiated throughout the Middle Ages. It grew out of the National Competence Centre in Research's "Mediality: Historical Perspectives" (University of Zurich, Switzerland), which I directed from 2005 to 2017. I am immensely grateful for the wealth of inspirations the Centre provided and for numerous possibilities to discuss my ideas with colleagues and students from various fields of the humanities. Special thanks go to Ulrich Johannes Beil, Maximilian Benz, Cornelia Herberichs, Susanne Köbele, Aleksandra Prica, Susanne Reichlin, Mireille Schnyder, Martina Stercken, and Margrit Tröhler. For the opportunity to present parts of this book in lectures I would like to thank Brigitte Bedos-Rezak (New York), Carla Dauven-van Knippenberg (Amsterdam), Andrea von Hülsen-Esch (Düsseldorf), Ingrid Kasten (Berlin), Elke Koch (Berlin), Klaus Krüger (Berlin), Ludger Lieb (Heidelberg), Ursula Peters (Köln), Ulrich Pfisterer (Munich), Gerhard Regn (Munich), Werner Röcke (Berlin), Christoph Schanze (Giessen), Marie-Anne Vannier (Metz), Peter Strohschneider (Munich), David E. Wellbery and Christopher Wild (both Chicago). A first English version of chapter 8, translated by Jake Fraser, appeared in Temporality and Mediality in Late Medieval and Early Modern Culture, edited by Christian Kiening and Martina Stercken, 115–146, Turnhout: Brepols, 2018. What has made this English translation possible is the encouragement and support of Patrick Geary (Princeton), the wonderful cooperation of my translator Nicola Barfoot, and financial support from the Centre and the University of Zurich.
