

Contents

|   |           |
|---|-----------|
| Preface   | ix        |
| Rodger Citron  |           |
| Introduction   | 1  |
| How Many Shanghai Jews Were There?  | 3         |
| Steve Hochstadt  |           |
| Shanghai before the War  | 27 |
| Shanghai Remembered: Recollections of Shanghai's Baghdadi Jews  | 29        |
| Maisie Meyer   |           |
| The Burak Family: The Migration of a Russian Jewish Familythrough the First Half of the Twentieth Century           | 73        |
| Anne Atkinson  |           |
| Russian Jews in Shanghai 1920–1950: New Life as Shanghailanders   | 85        |
| Liliane Willens  |           |
| Shanghai and the Holocaust   | 97 |
| Desperate Hopes, Shattered Dreams: The 1937 Shanghai–ManilaVoyage of the “Gneisenau” and the Fate of European Jewry | 99        |
| Jonathan Goldstein   |           |
| Diplomatic Rescue: Shanghai as a Means of Escape and Refuge   | 116       |
| Manli Ho   |           |
| 305/13 Kungping Road  | 127       |
| Lotte Marcus   |           |
| Survival in Shanghai 1939–1947  | 137       |
| Evelyn Pike Rubin  |           |

|   |            |
|---|------------|
| What I Learned from Shanghai RefugeesSteve Hochstadt   | 143        |
| Chinese Responses to the Holocaust: Chinese Attitudes towardJewish Refugees in the Late 1930s and Early 1940sXu Xin                                      | 158        |
| Looking Back at Shanghai   | 177 |
| Imagined Geographies, Imagined Identities, Imagined Glocal HistoriesDan Ben-Canaan   | 179        |
| Ephemeral Memories, Eternal Traumas and Evolving Classifications:Shanghai Jewish Refugees and Debates about Defining a Holocaust SurvivorGabrielle Abram | 203        |
| Bibliography  | 232        |
| Index   | 236        |