

Acknowledgments

The need for a second edition of this text arose much more quickly than was expected, and I owe a great debt of thanks to all of its contributors for their willingness to reengage with the project and revise its substance on comparatively short notice. This collaborative effort is one that I am privileged to be a part of as I continue to study and reflect on this important region with so many distinguished colleagues. We all remain cognizant of the central role played by the late Marsha Pripstein Posusney in launching the book, and we honor her memory as we work to keep it current.
