

The Contributors

William P. Avery is professor of political science at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. His published articles have appeared in the American Journal of Political Science, International Organization, International Studies Quarterly, Political Science Quarterly, and elsewhere. He is co-editor of several books, including (with David Rapkin) America in a Changing World Political Economy.

Cal Clark is professor of political science at the University of Wyoming. He is the author of numerous articles and books, including Taiwan's Development. His teaching and research interests focus upon international political economy and comparative public policy.

David Kowalewski is associate professor of political science at Alfred University. His works on global political economy have appeared in Comparative Political Studies, the Journal of Political and Military Sociology, and elsewhere. He is also author of Transnational Corporations and Caribbean Inequality.

Robert E. Looney is professor in the Department of National Security Affairs, Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, California. He is author of several articles and books, including Third World Military Expenditures and Arms Production. In addition to his ongoing research on Third World defense expenditures, he is presently investigating industrial development in the Persian Gulf.

Ulrich Pfister is senior assistant for information management in the Humanities Faculty at the University of Zürich, Switzerland. His research interests include international political economy and the economic and social history of early modern Europe. He is author of The Origins of Birth Limitation and, with Christian Suter, is currently completing a book on international indebtedness.

David P. Rapkin is associate professor and chair of political science at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He has contributed articles to Comparative Political Studies, Cooperation and Conflict, International Interactions, and the Journal of Conflict Resolution. Together with William Avery, he edited America in a Changing World Political Economy. He is presently visiting professor at Tsukuba University, Japan.

Kenneth A. Rodman is associate professor of political science at Colby College. He is author of Sanctity Versus Sovereignty: The United States and the Nationalization of Natural Resource Investments. His current research focuses upon state attempts to enlist multinational corporations as instruments of economic sanctions.

John M. Rothgeb, Jr. is associate professor of political science at Miami University (Ohio). His articles on international political economy have appeared in International Studies Quarterly, the Journal of Conflict Resolution, Comparative Political Studies, the Journal of Peace Research, World Development, International Interactions, and Studies in Comparative International Development.

Kathleen C. Schwartzman is assistant professor of sociology, University of Arizona. She is completing a book on the collapse of democracy in Portugal and is also working on a comparative study of the role of foreign trade in the twentieth century world system.

Christian Suter is assistant in the Sociological Institute at the University of Zürich, Switzerland. He has published a book entitled External Indebtedness of Third World Countries and Global Debt Crises in the 19th and 20th Centuries. Presently, he is working with Ulrich Pfister on a new book dealing with international indebtedness.