
Acknowledgments

I owe my sincere gratitude to the authors of this volume, whose commitment and time dedicated to this project went far beyond what was initially requested of them. Others who deserve special acknowledgment for their valuable work are Guadalupe Paz, the program's assistant director, for coordinating the project and overseeing every step in the editing and publication process; Donna Verdier for her superb editing work; and Charles Roberts for his able translation work.

My deepest gratitude goes to Clint Smith and the Hewlett Foundation for making it possible to continue our efforts to contribute to the field of Latin American studies.
