This edition could not have appeared without the support of the editors of the series and of the publishers, for which I am most grateful. The texts contained herein are reproduced with the kind permission of the libraries and archives to which they belong: Cambridge University Library (MS Additional 2830); Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge (MS 417/447); the British Library, London (Additional MS 37075; Additional MS 60577; Arundel MS 249; Harley MS 1587; Royal MS 12.B.xx); the Bodleian Library, Oxford (MS Rawlinson D. 328); Lincoln College, Oxford (MS Lat. 129); the Somerset Record Office, Taunton (DD/L/Box 154 no. 13; DD/L/P29/29); and the Beinecke Library, Yale University, New Haven (MS 3 (34)). I am indebted to these institutions and their staffs for allowing me access to transcribe the texts, as well as to the staff of the Bodleian Library for their assistance during my research for the volume. I am also grateful to the editors of Archaeologia Cantiana, Somerset Archaeology and Natural History, Proceedings of the Suffolk Institute of Archaeology and History, Traditio, and The Yale Library Gazette for having published versions of texts in this book and for permitting their republication within these pages. However, all these previously published texts have been re-examined and revised since their first appearance.

I owe a great deal to Mr Michael Benskin and Professor Vincent McCarren for their generous help with earlier editions of two of the texts, and, more recently, to Professor Andrew Galloway both for his published work on medieval riddles and for much-appreciated assistance with the riddles in MS Rawlinson D. 328. More still is owed to the publishers' reader, who was unsparing of time and expertise in advising on my manuscript, to its great advantage, and to my copy-editor, Dr Stephen Shapiro, who scrutinized it in detail and made many valuable suggestions. Any remaining faults are wholly my own. My friends Dr N.J. Richardson and the Right Reverend Dr David Thomson, bishop of Huntingdon, have been sources of advice and encouragement in my work over many years. The book is dedicated to them in gratitude.
