

Editors' Note

This volume of the Haskins Society Journal includes papers read at the 34th Annual Conference of the Charles Homer Haskins Society at Carleton College in November 2015, papers read at earlier Haskins conferences, and individual paper submissions. Martin Millett delivered the C. Warren Hollister Memorial Lecture and Katherine L. Hodges-Kluck's essay received the 2015 Bethell Prize, judged by Bruce O'Brien of Mary Washington University, Washington, DC.

This is the regular volume for 2015. The Editor and Associate Editor would like to offer thanks to the contributors, anonymous reviewers, and to Caroline Palmer and her excellent staff at Boydell & Brewer, Ltd. for their help and patience during the production of this volume.

The Haskins Society Journal is an international refereed journal, and its contents are not limited to papers read at the Society's own conference or at the sessions which it sponsors at Leeds, Kalamazoo, or other venues. Papers on topics in the many fields and periods of the medieval past to which Charles Homer Haskins contributed, including but not limited to Anglo-Saxon, Viking, Norman, and Angevin history as well as the history of the neighboring peoples and territories, are welcome from any scholar. Authors intending to submit are asked to consult the Society's website (www.haskinssociety.org) or write to the Editor (Dr. Laura Gathagan, Department of History, SUNY Cortland, P.O. Box 2000 Cortland, NY 13045-0900, USA; email: laura.gathagan@cortland.edu) or Associate Editor (Dr. William North, Department of History, Carleton College, 1 North College Street, Northfield, MN 55057, USA; email: wnorth@carleton.edu).
