Pacific Perspectives

Studies of the European Society for Oceanists

Series Editors: Christina Toren, University of St Andrews, and Edvard Hviding, University of Bergen

Oceania is of enduring contemporary significance in global trajectories of history, politics, economy and ecology. The books published in this series explore Oceanic values and Oceanic imaginations, documenting the unique position of the region – its cultural and linguistic diversity, its ecological and geographical distinctness, and always fascinating experiments with social formations. This series thus conveys the political, economic and moral alternatives that Oceania offers the contemporary world.
