

CONTRIBUTORS

Elisabeth Dette-Koch is responsible for the coordination of activities regarding European institutions in the Office of the Prime Minister of Baden-Württemberg. From 1997 to 2001 she was responsible for the Office of European Affairs in the mission of Baden-Württemberg in Bonn and later Berlin. She was also the Observer for the Länder at the EU in Brussels in 1996–97. She is an adjunct professor at the Professional College of Public Administration in Kehl.

Udo Diedrichs is research fellow at the Department of Political Science of the University of Cologne. His main research areas are institutional issues of European integration, EU external policy, and transatlantic relations.

Gisela Färber is Professor of Public Finance at the German Postgraduate School of Administrative Sciences in Speyer and director of the section Multilevel Government Systems of the Research Institute for Public Administration (FÖV) at the same institution. She has published widely in the field of German and comparative public finance.

Franz Greß, retired, taught comparative politics at the Johann-Wolfgang-Goethe Universität, Frankfurt am Main, and is a member of the board of directors of the university's Center for North American Studies. He has published extensively in the field of federalism with a special focus on Germany, the United States, and the European Union.

Wolf D. Gruner holds the Chair of Modern and Contemporary European History and Jean Monnet Professor of European Integration

History and European Studies at the University of Rostock. His research interests include international relations; federalism; European, German, regional, and constitutional history; European and international institutions; and the German question in European history.

Arthur B. Gunlicks is Professor of Political Science and Chair of the Department of Political Science at the University of Richmond, Virginia. He has published widely on German politics, especially German federalism and party and campaign finance. His most recent book is The Länder and German Federalism (Manchester University Press, 2003).

Hermann K. Heußner is a professor of law and administration at the Catholic Professional College of North Germany in Osnabrück. He has been a visiting scholar at the Notre Dame School of Law and the University of California, Berkeley, School of Law. His publications have focused on direct democracy in Germany and the United States.

Charlie Jeffery is Professor of German Politics and Deputy Director of the Institute for German Studies at the University of Birmingham. He also directs a U.K.-wide research program on devolution and constitutional change for the British Economic and Social Research Council. He is the editor of Recasting German Federalism: The Legacies of Unification (London: Pinter, 1999), and has published widely on various aspects of German politics.

Uwe Leonardy was a high-level civil servant who worked in the legislative staff of Schleswig-Holstein, in the federal chancellor's office, and in the Mission of Lower Saxony to the Federation in Bonn, a position from which he retired in 1999. He has published widely in German and English on a variety of topics concerning German federalism, European integration, and parliamentary issues. He is currently a senior fellow at the Centre for European Integration Studies at the University of Bonn.

Peter Lösche is Professor of Political Science at the University of Göttingen. He has been a visiting professor in the United States and Italy. His research interests include the history of the working-class movement in Germany, politics and society in the United States, and political parties and interest groups in cross-national comparison.

Werner J. Patzelt is Professor for Comparative Government at the Dresden University of Technology. He is the author of numerous books on German members of parliament, three textbooks on political science and research methodology, and many articles in German and English on deputies, parliamentarianism, and political institutions. In addition, he has edited volumes on parliamentary symbols and on the former GDR's Volkskammer.