

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We met many people during the past few years to discuss the debates and themes covered in this book. We thank them for challenging our own thinking and in doing so to widen the perspectives shared in this book. The UK African Studies Association at the University of Birmingham offered an opportunity for debating early versions of many of the chapters during a series of panel discussions across several days in September 2018.

We gratefully acknowledge the UK Department for International Development who funded our work through the Agricultural Policy Research in Africa Consortium (www.future-agricultures.org/apra). We would also like to acknowledge support from the European Research Council through an Advanced Grant for the PASTRES (Pastoralism, Uncertainty, Resilience: Lessons from the Margins) project (www.pastres.org).

A few individuals provided critical support to complete the book, and we extend our immense gratitude to them: Monica Allen for accomplished copy-editing, John Hall for precise maps and Oliver Burch for tireless administrative assistance. We also thank two external peer reviewers for helpful comments. Finally, we thank Jacqueline Mitchell, our commissioning editor at James Currey and Lynn Taylor, managing editor, for their steady hands in seeing the book through to completion.

This volume follows, wherever possible, the Ethiopian naming system wherein the first name and the name of the father or grandfather are given in full in that order.
