

ILLUSTRATIONS

2.1. Wage and Profit Share of GDP. Source: Derzhstat	52
2.2. Investments in fixed capital, 1994=100%. Source: Derzhstat.	54
2.3. Structure of Ukrainian exports, %. Source: Derzhstat.	61
3.1. A French map of the Russian-Ottoman borderlands in 1769. The future location of Kryvyi Rih, marked with a spot, is situated in the steppes, controlled by nomads and Cossacks, far from all 'civilized' settlements. Source: Vkraina.com.ua .	70
3.2. Striking miners holding the banner: 'The Lenin mine will stand till the end'. Source: Shakhtar Kryvbasu , 29 February 1992.	74
4.1. The geographical contours of Kryvyi Rih. Source: Google Maps.	89
4.2. A trolleybus purchased in 1992 and repaired in 2014. The inscription on board says it was refurbished thanks to the money donated by AMKR. Photo taken by the author in March 2019.	94
4.3. A makeshift cover over a manhole. Such covers, made from various materials at hand, are the initiative of local residents worried about public safety. Stories about people and even horses falling into unprotected manholes were abundant. Photo taken by the author in February 2019.	100
4.4. Stairs leading to the most centrally located metrotram station in Yesenina Street, next to the city council and chic restaurants. Photo taken by the author in March 2019.	101
4.5. The beach, renovated in 2007 and neglected ever since. The plaque says: 'The beach complex was built with the help of the member of parliament Oleksandr Vilkul in May 2007'. Photo taken by the author in May 2019.	102
4.6. A freshly painted children's playground situated in an otherwise decrepit park. The inscription at the entrance says: ‘May the children’s laughter ring loud! – Konstantin Pavlov’. Pavlov was one of the key members of Vilkul’s team; he succeeded him as mayor in 2020. Photo taken by the author in June 2019.	103

6.1.	Sport trophies of KZRK workers on display in the corridor at the local PMGU head office. Photo taken by the author in March 2019.	132
6.2.	AMKR’s social expenses in 2017, UAH millions from a total value of 340.6. Source: the website of AMKR.	143
7.1.	The improvised canteen at Screenwind. Photo taken by the author in March 2019.	165
7.2.	View of the factory. Window sashes are stacked ready to be taken by my team and equipped with metal fittings. Photo taken by the author in April 2019.	168
8.1.	Monument to Danko, the main character of a short story by Maxim Gorky, at one of the squares of Kryvyi Rih. In order to lead his tribe out of the wilderness, Danko ripped out his own heart, which glowed and showed the way to the people. Photo taken by the author in April 2019.	186
8.2.	An example of resourcefulness as an individual strategy of social reproduction: a public lawn that has been appropriated by the owners of a nearby house, who use it to grow food. Photo taken by the author in July 2018.	200
8.3.	Makeshift food cellars in a residential area in Kryvyi Rih. Photo taken by the author in June 2019.	202
9.1.	Preparations for the military parade. A platoon of Cossack reconstructors, standing beside the cadets of local military colleges, are a new element of this traditional Soviet ceremony. Their presence attests to a partial integration of the ethnonationalist agenda into the older ritual. Photo taken by the author in February 2019.	230
10.1.	Space designated for political advertisement and information concerning the presidential elections is fully occupied by private ads offering jobs, loans, home refurbishment services, money for hair and transportation services. Photo taken by the author in April 2019.	250