

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This project has greatly benefited from lively exchanges with colleagues over the last several years. I am grateful for valuable feedback from Ofer Ashkenazi, James Dillard, Mila Ganeva, Anjeana Hans, Brook Henkel, Todd Herzog, Barbara Kosta, Rick McCormick, Barbara Mennel, Mihaela Petrescu, Christian Rogowski, Jonathan Skolnik, Avraham Steinberg, Philipp Stiasny, Christen Symmons, Regine Wagenblast, Cynthia Walk, Kerry Wallach, and Paul J. Weindling. I am grateful to Father Patrick Desbois and the Center for Jewish Civilization at Georgetown University for inviting me to deliver the keynote address at the conference, Killer Medicine: A Forensic Look at Health Care Policies and Practices During and Since the Holocaust, in March 2018. For continued support of my work, I thank my talented coeditor and good friend Valerie Weinstein.

I thank Nikolaus Braun at the Archives of the District (Kommunalverband der oberbayerischen Städte und Gemeinden) of Upper Bavaria, who assisted with accessing the patient file archive from the Eglfing-Haar asylum 1939–1945. For help locating the 1949 trial transcripts of Eglfing-Haar’s director, Hermann Pfannmüller, I thank archivist Lukas Ortner from the Staatsarchiv München. I am also thankful to the late Gerrit Hohendorf both for his assistance in locating important archival sources and for his trailblazing scholarship on Medicine and the Holocaust.

I am grateful for the anonymous peer reviewers for valuable feedback, as well as to Sulaiman Ahmad, Keara Hagerty, and Amanda Horn at Berghahn for shepherding the book through all stages of publication. Additionally, I would like to thank my home institution, University of Houston Clear-Lake for a Faculty Development leave in Spring 2022 to work on this project and for financial support to cover production costs.

Much of this research was initially developed as conference papers. I thank the conference organizers and participants for lively discussions in Houston, Washington D.C., Pittsburg, Berlin, and Akko.

Some of the material used in the book first appeared in “Degenerate Disease and the Doctors of Death: Racial Hygienic Film as Medium of Propaganda in Weimar and Early Nazi Germany,” in Continuity and Crisis in German Cinema 1928–1936, ed. Barbara Hales, Mihaela Petrescu, and Valerie Weinstein (Rochester, NY: Camden House, 2016), 113–131.

Some of what I had to say also appeared first in “Unsettling Nerves: War Neuroses and Robert Reinert’s Nerven (1919),” in The Many Faces of Weimar Cinema, ed. Christian Rogowski (Rochester, NY: Camden House, 2010), 31–48.

My work in the area of Holocaust medical ethics grew out of my association over the last ten years with the Center for Medicine After the Holocaust Houston for which I currently serve as the center’s president. I am thankful to the center’s fellow board members including Steve Finkleman and Terry Rubin for their passion about this vital subject. I owe particular thanks to the center’s founder Sheldon Rubinfeld, whose tireless work on this subject will no doubt leave a lasting legacy.

Finally, I owe the greatest thanks to my amazing colleague and wonderful husband, Daniel Silvermintz.
