

DREAMING AND THE IMAGINATION

Ethnography, Theory, Experiment

Series Editors:

Martin Holbraad, Department of Anthropology, University College London

Soumhya Venkatesan, Senior Lecturer in Social Anthropology, University of Manchester

In recent years, ethnography has been increasingly recognized as a core method for generating qualitative data within the social sciences and humanities. This series explores a more radical, methodological potential of ethnography: its role as an arena of theoretical experimentation. It includes volumes that call for a rethinking of the relationship between ethnography and theory in order to question, and experimentally transform, existing understandings of the contemporary world.
