This book would never have come to fruition without the support, advice and encouragement of so many people. Immeasurable thanks to everyone who generously read drafts and offered suggestions while it was in process. Feedback from David Salter, Sarah Carpenter, and Greg Walker shaped the early stages of the book, and without the suggestions and clarity offered by Lucy Hinnie, Hannah Piercy, Basil Arnould Price, Sarah Dunnigan, Caitlin Flynn and Vicky Flood on the final drafts, it would never have seen the light of day. I am deeply grateful to my reviewer at Boydell and Brewer, and to Caroline Palmer and the rest of the editorial team, who have been beyond patient with this project's length (both of time and of words) and whose advice has been invaluable.

I drafted and submitted the proposal for this project during the COVID-19 lockdowns, and I could not have done so without the guidance and support of Liz Herbert McAvoy and Amy Burge, and the inspiration and encouragement of the community found through the Society for Medieval Feminist Scholarship and at the 'Gender and Medieval Studies' conferences (2021–23). They reminded me why I love this work, as did innumerable conversations with Will Tattersdill and with the wonderful students in the Children's Literature and Uses of Genre courses at the University of Birmingham, without whom this would not be a study of genre. In their willingness to read drafts and organise work-in-progress workshops, the contributors to the Medieval Mobilities and Reconsidering Consent and Coercion volumes, not to mention my wonderful co-editors, Basil Arnould Price, Megan Khoury, and Hannah Piercy, have modelled generous, collaborative, collegial and constructive academic practice that has inspired me and made me excited for the future of the academy.

No one exemplifies this spirit more entirely than my supervisor, Bettina Bildhauer. Her commitment to community building, deep generosity, and fierce advocacy for my work has been transformative, and I am endlessly grateful for her support, and that of the AHRC/DFG-funded 'Seven Sages of Rome' project, which has enabled me to complete this work. Also critical to its completion has been the needed distraction, laughter, and support of friends and colleagues: I am so grateful to the once and future book group, my wonderful amazons, and too many others to name here, who have helped me step out of myself, commiserated with and cheered me by turns, and constantly inspired me.

Finally, to my family – I don't have the words to really express how grateful I am for all the infinite ways you've supported me. Mom and Dad, thank you for giving me words, and wings, and the confidence to follow my dreams, even when they take me across the world. I am more and more aware of how very lucky I am to have always had your unshakeable belief in me. This, and these stories, are for you, as a thank you for all the many, many stories that you gave me, and that brought me here. Theo, thank you for your insight, your wisdom, and your encouragement – you're an inspiration and the best sister and compatriot I could imagine. And to James, thank you for keeping me going, for all the laughter, and your immense patience on this very long journey – it has meant the world.
