

Acknowledgments

This volume would have not been possible without the help and support of a number of colleagues and institutions. Our gratitude goes first and foremost to the editors of the European Conceptual History series of Berghahn Books, especially Willibald Steinmetz, Michael Freeden, and Diana Mishkova, who welcomed with the best of disposition our project and supported it from the beginning. Through its culmination we were fortunate enough to have Willibald regularly contacting us to get updates on the advancement of the volume, encouraging us, and giving us precious insights and suggestions.

We also wish to thank the authors for their commitment and patience during the five-year process of putting together the volume, which involved several workshops for discussing earlier versions of their chapters and a series of delays. This includes several other colleagues who offered a positive response to our invitation but for different reasons finally did not partake in the volume: Leonidas Karakatsanis, Yelda Kaya, Razvan Dumitru, František Šístek, and Nenad Stefanov. A number of colleagues have also provided us with their advice, and we would especially like to thank Claudio Ingerflom and José Luis Aguilar López-Barajas and also Adrián Velazques, who played the role of discussant in one of the workshops.

Lastly, we would have not been able to provide the efforts needed for the completion of this manuscript were it not for the support that we received over the years from our institutions, respectively the Center for the Humanities (CHAM) at the Universidade Nova de Lisboa and the École Française d'Athènes.
