Acknowledgements

There are many people we would like to thank. Firstly, thanks to all of the contributors who shared their research. We would like to thank the generosity of Dr Andrew Sanders and Professor Michael Laffan for reading early drafts of the chapters and for giving advice and encouragement. In addition, we thank the external reviewers. None of the above share any responsibility for any errors, factual or otherwise. Catherine Cox's research was supported by the Wellcome Trust. Thanks also go to Dr Sibylle Naglis. Anne MacFarlane and Tomas de Brún gratefully acknowledge the enormous contribution of the CARe peer researchers. Also the contributions made by the Health Services Executive, Western Area (Departments of Health Promotion and Primary Care) and the Galway Refugee Support Group. Thanks also go to Mary O'Reilly de Brún and Helen Lambert for their comments.

We would like to say thanks to our friends and colleagues who sustain us through difficult times. We thank also Northern Ireland Railway and the staff of the (Belfast–Dublin) Enterprise train, where much of this book was drafted and revised. Finally, thanks to our families in Belfast and Bristol who have supported us and put up with our occasional absences.

Ronnie and Stuart.
