

Acknowledgements

This project would not have been possible without the generous help, advice and support from my friends and family, as well as countless other people, and I would like to take this opportunity to thank them all.

First and foremost my thanks must go to Michael Hicks, who first drew my attention to this project, who supervised the PhD thesis on which this book is based, and who has been an unfailing source of support and encouragement during those years and beyond. I am grateful to King Alfred's College (now Winchester University), who supported my research with a generous studentship. Very special thanks go to my friends and colleagues at the Department of History and Welsh History at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth, who have been extremely supportive throughout in every possible way. I have moreover profited greatly from the helpful comments and the expertise of many others, notably Janet Burton and Martin Heale, who have seen different sections of this work, and who have allowed me to benefit from their knowledge of the subject. I am extremely thankful to Leslie Boatwright for very kindly sending me, and letting me use, an unpublished translation of the Croxden Chronicle, to Julian Luxford, who sent me drafts of several chapters from his work on the patronage of art in Benedictine monasteries, and to Huw Pryce, whose about-to-be-published chapter on the patrons of the Welsh Cistercians has been a valuable source of information. Many others have generously shared their knowledge with me, and for this I thank especially David Smith and Brian Golding, who examined my thesis, Christopher Holdsworth, Nigel Saul, Maureen Jurkowski and Barbara Yorke. The Scouloudi Foundation has supported this project with a generous grant, for which I would like to express my appreciation. I am also indebted to the staff of the archives and libraries to which my research has taken me during the past few years.

Many thanks to my friends for their encouragement, especially to Gigi Bormann, Mandy Richardson, Kirstine Dâ, Rachael Kay, Ryan Lavelle, Richard Brown, Martyn Powell, Julia Reid, Graeme Davies and Melanie Wagner.

I would also like to say 'diolch o galon' to Patrick Carlin, who has played a special part during the past years and who has helped in so many ways.

Finally, I owe a very special debt to Andrew Priest for his support and his infectious enthusiasm, and also for the fine food he delivered to my office during hectic times.

My parents, Suni and Werner, and my sister Viebke, however dispersed, have always been there for me, and for this I want to thank them more than I can say. This book is for them.
