

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to acknowledge, first and foremost, the scholastic efforts and good-natured cooperation of the fantastic group of contributors to this collection. I am very grateful to have such delightful colleagues to work with and I thank them for contributing their insightful research to this project. I would also like to thank Dymphna Evans at ARC for her assistance and support throughout; her advice and help have been crucial to the success of this collection, and she has been a real joy to work with. Thanks also to Erika Gaffney, who has ably stepped into Dymphna's shoes, as well as to Tom and Kennedy at ARC for their assistance with maps and genealogical trees for various chapters of the collection, which is very much appreciated.

With a background in French and philosophy, he is a specialist in the writings of poet Victor Segalen (1878–1919) and the aesthetics of diversity. Research interests include exoticism, postcolonial approaches to literature, Pacific writing, travel writing, and Western representations of Asia.

SeoKyung Han (PhD, philosophy, State University of New York at Binghamton) explores the book culture and history of antiquity through premodern East Asia. She focuses on how the Buddhist sutras and the (Neo-)Confucian classics were secularized and popularized across eras and regions and how women engaged in reproducing those authorial texts, not only as narrative object but also as author and/or as audience (reader and listener) of the texts.

Jane Hooper received her PhD from Emory University, Atlanta, in 2010 and she is currently an Assistant Professor in the Department of History and Art History at George Mason University, Fairfax, Virginia. Her book Feeding Globalization: Madagascar and the Provisioning Trade, 1600–1800 was published in 2017 by Ohio University Press as part of its Indian Ocean Studies series. She has also written articles about pirates, the slave trade from the Indian Ocean to the Americas, and teaching the trans-Atlantic slave trade. She is currently studying American commerce and whaling in the Indian Ocean during the first half of the nineteenth century.

Lois Huneycutt is Associate Professor of History at the University of Missouri, Columbia, and has worked extensively on Anglo-Norman queenship. She is currently at work on a project reassessing the role of women in Europe's conversion to Christianity, and her most recent publication is an article on women and power in volume two of Bloomsbury's A Cultural History of Women in the Middle Ages, edited by Kim M. Phillips.

Katarzyna Kosior is a Leverhulme Early Career Fellow in the Department of Humanities at Northumbria University, researching early modern Polish-Lithuanian kingship, elective monarchy, and masculinity. Her forthcoming book, Becoming a Queen in Early Modern Europe: East and West, will be published by Palgrave in 2019.

Reneé Langlois recently finished her MA at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, and completed her thesis on a wider comparison of the rule of the Ottoman validé sultans and the French queens regent during the early modern period that juxtaposes the means by which both sets of women accessed great political agency. She has presented stages of her work at the 2015 "Kings & Queens" conference IV and at the 2016 Western Ottomanists' Workshop. She also had the opportunity to present at the "Kings & Queens" V and VI, in 2016 and 2017, and at the 2017 Sixteenth Century Society and Conference. While her primary research focuses on royal women and sovereignty in France and the Ottoman Empire, Reneé also explores the ways that climate can be used as a lens to re-examine history. Her forthcoming article “Dynastic Loyalty and Allegiances: Ottoman Resilience during the Seventeenth Century Crisis” discerns the ways that the royal women of the imperial harem fought for Ottoman survival, and became major contributors to the empire’s resilience during a century of dramatic climate change that was witnessed throughout the world.

Hang Lin is currently Assistant Professor at Hangzhou Normal University, China. He has completed his MA and PhD in Chinese history at the University of Würzburg, Germany, and a postdoctoral project at the University of Hamburg. His major research interest focuses on the history of the Khitan and the Jurchen, the archaeology and material culture of the non-Han peoples in Chinese history, and manuscript culture and the history of the book in late imperial China. His recent publications include: “Nomadic Mothers as Rulers in China: Female Regents of the Khitan Liao (907–1125),” in Royal Mothers and Their Ruling Children: Wielding Political Authority from Antiquity to the Early Modern Era, edited by Ellie Woodacre and Carey Fleiner (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015), 105–25; and “Re-envisioning the Manchu and Qing History: A Question of Sinicization,” Archiv Orientalni 85 (2017): 141–54.
