The Thing Between You and Me

The Question Concerning the Sustaining Support of Digital Objects

I have to choose what I detest—either dreaming, which my intelligence hates, or action, which my sensibility loathes; either action, for which I wasn't born, or dreaming, for which no one was born.

Detesting both, I choose neither; but since I must on occasion either dream or act, I mix the two things together.

Fernando Pessoa | text 2 of The Book of Disquiet
