Abstract — XI

Introduction — 1

- 1 Why write this book? — 1
- 2 Descriptive issues — 3
- 3 Theoretical foundations — 6
- 4 The semantics-pragmatics interface — 10
- 5 Outline of the book — 12

Part I: Theoretical foundations

1 Types of meaning and the semantics-pragmatics interface — 17

- 1 Introduction — 17
- 2 Tests for disentangling types of meaning — 19
- 2.1 The explicitness test — 20
- 2.2 Negation — 26
- 3 A truth-conditional analysis of types of meaning — 32
- 3.1 Entailments — 32
- 3.2 Presupposition — 33
- 3.3 Explicatures — 35
- 3.4 Implicatures — 35
- 4 The semantics-pragmatics border — 38
- 5 The semantics-pragmatics interface — 43
- 6 Conclusion — 45

2 Conceptual and procedural meaning: lexical and non-lexical pragmatics — 47

- 1 Introduction — 47
- 2 Conceptual and procedural meaning, lexical and functional categories — 49
- 3 Conceptual and procedural meaning, truth-conditional and non-truth-conditional meaning — 54
- 4 Properties of procedural meaning — 57

- 5 A mixed model of conceptual and procedural meanings — 63
- 6 A test for conceptual-procedural meaning — 66
- 7 Conclusion: Conceptual and procedural meaning vs. types of meanings — 73

Part II: Time and tenses

- 3 Temporal reference and temporal order — 79
 - 1 Introduction — 79
 - 2 What is temporal reference? — 80
 - 2.1 Montagovian and neo-Davidsonian approaches — 80
 - 2.2 Aspectual classes — 83
 - 2.3 Temporal coordinates (Reichenbach) — 85
 - 3 What is temporal order? — 90
 - 3.1 Tenses and temporal order — 91
 - 3.2 Aspectual classes and temporal order — 94
 - 4 Pragmatic approaches to temporal order — 98
 - 5 Temporal order and narration — 101
 - 6 Conclusion — 109
- 4 Directional inferences: A conceptual/procedural approach to tenses — 111
 - 1 Introduction — 111
 - 2 The model of directional inference (MDI) — 112
 - 2.1 Background assumptions — 112
 - 2.2 Three main assumptions — 115
 - 2.3 Directional features — 119
 - 2.4 Three shortcuts — 122
 - 3 A conceptual and procedural approach to tenses — 127
 - 4 The Historical Present issue — 132
 - 5 Narration, directional inferences and FID — 134
 - 6 Conclusion — 138

Part III: Causality

- 5 Causality, temporal order and argumentation — 141
 - 1 Introduction — 141
 - 2 A model for causality — 143
 - 3 Causal relation as a non-iconic relation — 148

4	Causality, explanation, inference and justification —	152
5	Causality and argumentation —	156
6	Conclusion —	162
6	Causal connectives, conceptual and procedural meanings —	164
1	Introduction —	164
2	Causal relations between states and events —	165
3	Causal, inferential and temporal connectives usages in states/events relations —	167
4	Why causal connectives are backward —	173
5	Conceptual and procedural meanings in connectives —	177
5.1	parce que —	177
5.2	donc —	183
5.3	et —	186
6	Conclusion: the big picture —	189

Part IV: Logical words

7	Logical connectives and pragmatic meaning —	195
1	Introduction —	195
2	A formalist account of logical connectives —	196
3	Gricean, neo- and post-Gricean accounts for logical connectives —	202
4	Logical vs. discourse connectives —	209
5	Do logical connectives have conceptual and/or procedural meaning? —	215
6	Conclusion —	218
8	Descriptive and metalinguistic negation —	220
1	Introduction —	220
2	The function of negation in discourse —	220
3	A representational analysis of metalinguistic negation —	227
4	A set of criteria to disentangle descriptive and metalinguistic negation —	230
5	Connectives as disentangling usages of negation and more —	237
6	Is negation truth-conditional by default? —	242
7	Conclusion: is negation conceptual or procedural? —	248

Conclusion: How much is meaning conventional? — 251

- 1 Introduction — 251
- 2 Convention in meaning — 251
- 3 Convention, conceptual and procedural meaning — 255
- 4 A conclusion of a conclusion — 259
