

Table of Contents

Claudia Simone Dorchain/Felice Naomi Wonnenberg

Introduction — 1

Claudia Simone Dorchain

Cusanus, Nietzsche, and Lacan on Reflection

The Mirror as Philosophic and Political Concept — 5

Antonia Schmid

Alterophilia or Appropriating the Other

Images of 'Jews' and 'Gentiles' in Contemporary German Film — 17

A Passage to Modernity – The “Iconic Turn” and “Jewish Reality”

Interview with Tommaso Speccher — 37

Katja S. Baumgärtner

Some Filmic Heroines and ‘Others’ in the GDR Documentary Women in Ravensbrück (1968) — 51

Alina Gromova

A City of Mind

Berlin in the Perception of Young Russian-Speaking Jewish Migrants — 71

Lea Wohl von Haselberg

Between Self and Other

Representations of Mixed Relationships in Contemporary German Film and Television — 85

Mareike Albers

“Unkosher Jewish” – Jewish Popular Culture in Berlin — 99

“Morbidity Beauty” as an Aesthetic Concept to Portray “the Jew” in German Film

Interview with Felice Naomi Wonnenberg — 111

Barbara J. Steiner

Between Guilt and Repression – Conversion to Judaism after the Shoa — 123

Felice Naomi Wonnenberg

Can't Get No Satisfaction

The Desexualization of the Jewish Man in Contemporary German Film — 139

Katrin Köppert

Intra-Activities of the Queer Diaspora –

Berlin-Kreuzberg and the “Jerusalem Kings” Phenomenon — 157

Claudia Simone Dorchain

The Long Shadow of the Holy Cross

Jewish-Christian Gender-Images in

Max Färberböck's movie Aimée und Jaguar — 171

Tommaso Speccher

The Dead Jew as Eternal Other

Loss and Identification in the Memorial to the Murdered Jews of Europe in Berlin — 189

Felice Naomi Wonnenberg

Sissy and the Muscle-Jew Go to the Movies

The Image of the Jewish Man in Film after 1945 and

Its Reception in Germany — 205

Spaces of Memory – Reflections on Social Transformation at the Memorial for the Murdered Jews of Europe

Interview with Irit Dekel — 231

Authors — 239

Index of Persons — 241