

Table of Contents

Preface — VII

List of Contributors — XI

Images — XII

Abbreviations — XIII

Hugo Lundhaug & Liv Ingeborg Lied

Studying Snapshots: On Manuscript Culture, Textual Fluidity, and New Philology — 1

Hugo Lundhaug

An Illusion of Textual Stability: Textual Fluidity, New Philology, and the Nag Hammadi Codices — 20

Lance Jenott

Reading Variants in James and the Apocalypse of James: A Perspective from New Philology — 55

René Falkenberg

The Making of a Secret Book of John: Nag Hammadi Codex III in Light of New Philology — 85

Katrine Brix

Two Witnesses, One Valentinian Gospel? The Gospel of Truth in Nag Hammadi Codices I and XII — 126

Lillian I. Larsen

Monastic Paideia and Textual Fluidity in the Classroom — 146

Samuel Rubenson

Textual Fluidity in Early Monasticism: Sayings, Sermons and Stories — 178

J. Gregory Given

Four Texts from Nag Hammadi amid the Textual and Generic Fluidity of the “Letter” in the Literature of Late Antique Egypt — 201

Michael Philip Penn

Know Thy Enemy: The Materialization of Orthodoxy in Syriac Manuscripts — 221

Jeff Childers

“You Have Found What You Seek”: The Form and Function of a Sixth-Century Divinatory Bible in Syriac — 242

Liv Ingeborg Lied

Between “Text Witness” and “Text on the Page”: Trajectories in the History of Editing the Epistle of Baruch — 272

Eva Mroczek

The End of the Psalms in the Dead Sea Scrolls, Greek Codices, and Syriac Manuscripts — 297

James R. Davila

Translating the Hekhalot Literature: Insights from New Philology — 323

Indices — 347