This volume derives from a conference held in Frankfurt in 2014. I would like to express my heartfelt gratitude to Christian Wiese for his tremendous support instrumental in bringing this conference to Frankfurt, including the assistance provided by Grazyna Jurewicz and Ansgar Martins from the department he chairs. I am also especially grateful to Recha Allgaier-Honal, Felix Hedderich and Anna Grochocka for meticulously applying the guidelines of the style sheet to all articles submitted. I wish to thank Bill Templer for translations and proof-reading services that are as always of an extremely high standard. My thanks also go to an anonymous proof-reader who made valuable comments on all the articles. The conference and the publication of the volume would not have been possible without the generous support of the Research Training Group “Theology as an Academic Discipline” at the Goethe University Frankfurt, the Union of Friends and Promoters of the Wolfgang Goethe-University and the International Office at the same university. Last but not least, I wish to thank the publisher and the editors for including this volume in the series Studia Judaica. Above all, I owe a debt of great gratitude to all the contributors to this volume, whose suggestive papers I found very stimulating for refining my own thinking and with whom it was a truly great pleasure and honor to work.
