Acknowledgments

Writing a book is a solitary and collaborative matter at the same time. At this point I would like to thank all those who made it easier and possible for me to write and complete this work. My first thanks go to my doctoral supervisor, Prof. Hermann Kappelhoff, who helped me to find a topic, who over the years has repeatedly given me conceptual and theoretical orientation and has supported me in many ways and in many respects. In particular, the translation of this work into English would never have been possible without the generous support of the Cinepoetics research group, which he heads. Furthermore, I would like to thank my second supervisor, Prof. Gertrud Koch, who has provided me with numerous valuable advice and tips, both on a thematic and methodological level.

In general I would like to express my thanks to the colloquia of Prof. Kappelhoff, Prof. Koch, and the Graduate School of the Cluster Languages of Emotion for a whole series of stimulating, motivating and fruitful discussions about my work. In particular, I would like to thank Sarah Greifenstein (for proofreading and for many helpful suggestions, especially on suspense), Sarah-Mai Dang (for proofreading), David Gaertner (for his generous help in getting me started with the corpus), as well as Jan-Hendrik Bakels and Hye-Jeung Chung for thoughts that have helped this work forward. James Lattimer has translated this book from German into English in an empathetic way and has been an attentive conversation partner for me. Naomi Vaughan has revised the translation dedicatedly and carefully. I would like to thank Alena Horbelt for the final corrections and the entire formal revision of the English version. Finally, I would like to thank the Cluster Languages of Emotion – on the one hand for the financial support, without which this work would not have been possible; and on the other hand the management of the graduate school, namely Prof. Gisela Klann-Delius and Dr. Markus Edler, who supported the development of this work in a benevolent manner and did their utmost to further it.

My final thanks go to my wife Judith, who has not only supported me in my work on this book and who sees me like nobody else.
