The present volume is based on papers presented at the workshop titled “Sacred texts? Hebrew Bible, New Testament, and Qur’ān in Jewish research of the Nineteenth Century and beyond” held at the Herbert D. Katz Center for Advanced Judaic Studies, Philadelphia, on December 10, 2014.

This workshop was the concluding event for the fall semester of an academic year (2014/15) dedicated to research on “New Perspectives on the Origins, Context, and Diffusion of the Academic Study of Judaism” and was organized by several of the fellows together with staff members. We wish to extend our gratitude to the wonderful staff of the Herbert D. Katz Center for all the assistance we received in organizing this day of study, especially to Natalie B. Dohrmann, Associate Director, who was part of the organizing committee, contributed her own insights and helped us to develop our ideas and to understand the requirements for organizing a workshop in an academic setting that was very new for most of us, to Carry Michelle Love, Fellowship Coordinator and Assistant to the Director, who was the woman behind the scenes before and during the day of the workshop, and to Steven Weitzman, Director of the center, whose own studies in the field of Hebrew Bible were a source of inspiration for many of us, and whose deep confidence in our work always encouraged us to put our academic visions into practice.

During the course of preparing this volume, we once again received generous and skilled assistance from various individuals: Matthew Chalmers (University of Pennsylvania) helped with the English language editing, Christoph Tödter (Universität Leipzig) provided the typesetting of the book, and Alice Meroz, Florian Ruppenstein and Sophie Wagenhofer at the publishing house De Gruyter in Berlin unfailingly and diligently oversaw the technical aspects of publishing this volume.
