

Contents

Acknowledgments — V

Introduction: On Plot and the One-by-One — 1

Part I: Poetry: Necessity and Plot in Aristotle and Eighteenth-Century German Criticism

- 1 Unexpected Yet Connected: On Aristotle's Poetics and its Heterodox Receptions — 17
  - Universals and tragic plot — 19
  - The catharsis of events — 21
  - Suspense for the sake of suspense — 26
  - The riven Poetics — 32
- 2 Contingency, Connection, and Possible Worlds: History and Poetry in Gottsched's Versuch einer critischen Dichtkunst — 38
  - Borrowing from the possible — 40
  - Unruly Scharfsinnigkeit — 44
  - Fabel* and possible realities — 47
  - Clear connections and the constraints of Zusammenhang — 50
  - Real connections in fabulated narratives — 55

Part II: History: Aesthetic Connection in Historical Knowledge and Historical Composition

- 3 Cognitio historica between Kant and Meier — 61
  - Temporality and aesthetics in cognitio historica — 64
  - Perfect and beautiful knowledge — 71
  - Narrative knowledge and the temporality of history — 76
- 4 “On the Wings of Imagination”: Wholeness and Spontaneity in Kant's Philosophy of Universal History — 78
  - Judgment and history — 80
  - Teleology and history — 83
  - The effectivity of historical form — 85

Freedom, spontaneity, and the infinitesimal — 87
Continuity and the novel of history — 90
Humboldt's mediated representation — 92
Benjamin and Kant — 94
5 Not Benjamin's Ranke: On the Aesthetics of Historicism — 98
Form in Hegelian historicism — 100
Ranke's constructed historicism — 102
Not progress, not development — 105
Ranke and ideology — 107
Old and older historicism — 111
 Part III: Epochality: On Phenomenology's Appeals to a Disconnected Past
6 Heidegger and the Plot of Metaphysics — 119
Dasein's historicity — 121
The emplotment of inquiry — 123
The epochal history of metaphysics — 126
The disappearance of history — 129
Freedom and the history of being — 132
7 Arendt's Epochal Phenomenology: History and the New — 135
Anti-Semitism in Origins of Totalitarianism — 138
Freedom or narrative: Competing Kantianisms — 143
The totalitarianism of "process" — 147
Arendt's realist Kantianism — 151
8 Speaking for the Past: On Begriffsgeschichte and the Language of Other Epochs — 153
Connections to the past — 154
Temporalities and the conditions of history — 157
Narrative and phenomenology: Mutual interferences — 161
Koselleck's exemplary phenomenology — 167

Conclusion: Wholeness and its Sabotage — 170

Bibliography — 175

Index — 194

