I am incredibly grateful to a number of people who have accompanied me through my PhD thesis, on which this book is based, and everyone who has become part of my academic (and non-academic) life since. First, I would like to thank the editor of the TiEL series, Elizabeth Traugott, for her great help in revising the manuscript, and bringing it to completion – her comments, suggestions, and general support have been immensely valuable to me, and have certainly had a more than positive impact on this book. Many thanks are also due to the two reviewers of my thesis, Timothy Coleman and Gunther Kaltenböck, whose remarks were greatly appreciated and have guided many changes made to the original manuscript. Any remaining shortcomings are of course my own.

Niki Ritt has played an enormous role in supervising and shaping my PhD, and continues to be a huge inspiration. Not only would this book not exist in its present form without him, my entire way of thinking about linguistics – and life in general – would be entirely different. Niki has been the greatest of mentors, and I feel very lucky for it. I am furthermore deeply grateful for the ideas, co-operation and friendship I have received from my former colleagues in Vienna, most importantly Andreas Baumann, Nora Dorn-Verlooy, Kamil Kaźmierski, Christina Prämer, Lotte Sommerer, and Lotti Viola.

My new colleagues in York, above all Ann Taylor and Julia Kolkman, deserve huge thanks for welcoming and looking after me in the best possible way – I am very happy to be part of this department, and to be surrounded by so many excellent people (on both an academic and personal level). York is also where most of the transformation from thesis to book took place. Zurich has opened up possibilities for new endeavours; here, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Marianne Hundt, who has been a great source of encouragement and support, and who is generally a remarkable person. I look forward to things to come. Finally, I am thankful for the inspiring input from, and fun times with, a range of linguists all around, in particular Lauren Fonteyn. My family and (non-linguistic) friends are equally amazing.
