

Contents

Preface: Reflections on Reflexivity — XIII

Introduction: The Instrumentalisation of Historiography and the Production of Victimhood — 1

Nationalism(')s Without — 3

Indigenism and Authenticity — 6

Who Will Historicise the Historians? The 1980s as A Good Time to Be Brown — 10

At Home in India: The Unity of Left and Right Culturalism — 13

Feedback Loops — 16

Part One Marking the Posts

1 Identifying the Beast Within: Postcolonial Theory and History — 21

1.1 Themes, Concerns, Locations: A Partial Inventory — 25

1.2 (Post)Marxism and the Lost Histories of Liberation: The case of Subaltern Studies — 30

1.3 Decolonising the Self — 37

1.4 Theme and Variations: Writing History and the (Post) Coloniser — 42

1.5 Some Conclusions — 45

2 Manifesto on Indirections: Histories, Collective Victimhood and Postcolonialism — 48

2.1 States and Values — 51

2.2 The Potential Cultural Subjectivity of Occidental Civilisation — 53

2.3 By Way of Conclusion — 54

Part Two Instrumentalisations

3 The Revolt of Memory: 1857 in the Nationalist Imagination — 59

3.1 Introduction: Nationalism, History and Memory — 59

3.2 1857 and National Memory — 61

3.3 Framing 1857 — 66

3.4 Sir Saiyid Ahmad Khan's 1857 — 70

- 3.5 Vinayak Damodar Savarkar's 1857 — 76
- 3.6 Jawaharlal Nehru's 1857 — 81
- 3.7 Anniversaries Again: Maulana Abul Kalam Azad's Version in 1957 — 87
- 3.8 Conclusions: The Marxist 1857? — 88

- 4 Histories of Empire, Imperial Legitimation and the Wartime Career of Penderel Moon — 91
 - 4.1 Introduction — 91
 - 4.2 Strangers? — 96
 - 4.3 Resolving a Dilemma — 103
 - 4.4 Rewritten Mythology — 104
 - 4.5 Conclusion — 109

- 5 History, Cinema and the Politics of Cultural Sensitivity in Interwar India — 110
 - 5.1 Introduction — 110
 - 5.2 Imperial Anxieties and Cultural Fixers — 111
 - 5.3 Public Sentiment and Diplomatic Organisation — 118
 - 5.4 Conclusions — 124

Part Three Postdiscursive Possibilities

- 6 Moving Ideas and How to Catch Them — 129
 - 6.1 In Search of an In-Between History of Ideas: Some Methodological Questions — 130
 - 6.2 Clusters, Framing, Legitimation — 136
 - 6.3 Ideas and the Terms That (do not) Bear Them — 140
 - 6.4 Communicative Contexts and the Pre-Education of the Collective — 143
 - 6.5 Some Conclusions — 147

- 7 Travellers in Archives, or the Possibilities of a Post-Post-Archival Historiography — 149
 - 7.1 Introduction — 149
 - 7.2 Archives: Accessible and Private — 151
 - 7.3 Joshi, Krüger and the Communist History Plot that Failed — 154
 - 7.4 How to Do Things with Archives — 158
 - 7.5 "The" Archive? In Lieu of a Conclusion — 159

8 Afterword: Is There a Discipline to This? — 163

Acknowledgements — 167

Index — 168

