The Necropolis of the Vaulted Tombs at Thebes: the Demotic Material

The necropolis of vaulted tombs on the Asasif, attested from a range of Ptolemaic documentary sources, was the object of a series of fieldwork missions from the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, and by Howard Carter and Carnarvon at the beginning of the 20th century, although only short reports were published around the time of the excavations. Some of the material culture recovered, which included demotic ostraca and inscribed embalmers' pots, is presented here for the first time.
