Any worthy academic study crystallises in an echo chamber of many voices. It has been a delight during my research to have encountered so much encouragement, support and inspiration, for which I respectfully extend my gratitude.

I am thankful to the Elsa-Neumann-Scholarship from the State of Berlin (Elsa-Neumann-Stipendium des Landes Berlin – Nafög) and to Cinepoetics – Center for Advanced Film Studies at Freie Universität Berlin, whose support and financial backing helped me launch my project and bring it to a close. I am also thankful to the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) that made my preliminary academic excursion to Israel possible.

Special thanks are extended to my supervisor at Freie Universität Berlin, Prof. Dr. Hermann Kappelhoff, and his wonderful team, particularly Dr. Christian Pischel, Prof. Bernhard Groß, Dr. Christina Schmitt, Dr. Eileen Rositzka, Prof. Sarah Greifenstein, Dr. Hauke Lehmann, Regina Brückner, Tatjana Schwegler, Eh-Jae Kim and Maximilian Grenz for accompanying me over portions in a long winding road, and generously providing much needed perspective and commentary. I likewise thank my second supervisor Prof. Dr. Tal Ilan for her support and encouragement.

My research benefited greatly from the medial and bibliographical sources that were made available to me. I would like to thank Karen Sitton the director of the Bloomfield Library at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and Atara Kotliar, head of the media department, who generously granted me access to their valuable resources. I thank Meir Russo, Gad Astar, Nizar Natasha and Daniela Faingold from the Jerusalem Cinematheque archive for bearing with my requests and hosting me over many sessions with a kind and colloquial spirit. I thank Dr. Dror Yizhar and Tomer Kep from the Tel Aviv Cinematheque Library, who shared their gems with true friendliness and interest. An honorary mention is owed to the Jerusalem branch of The Third Ear. This video rental store catered in its former commercial capacity not only my work, but also the vibrant community of art-cinema enthusiasts of the city, as it continues to do in its present non-profit form.

I am indebted to many scholars from different countries, institutes and disciplines, who engaged with me in fruitful interactions over various aspects of my thesis, only a few of whom can be mentioned here. My gratitude is extended to Ralf Dittrich from Berlin, who shares my enthusiasm for Israeli “oldies”, and gave me helpful guidance for my archival venture. I thank Dr. Christina Pareigis from ZfL Berlin, whose lectures about Jewish humour inspired the approach that I developed in this thesis. I thank Dr. Marc Siegel from the Goethe University in Frankfurt am Main, who generously assisted me in reaching new platforms, and Dr. Shmulik Duvdevani from Tel Aviv University, who never failed to offer his perspective and provide assistance. Special thanks to Dr. Jon Templeman for his excellent editing work. Last but not least, I thank Dr. Drehli Robnik from the University of Vienna for our regular invigorating discussions.

I had the privilege to discuss my thesis with many interested parties, Israeli, German and other outside the academic forum. I thank all those people for their contribution, and particularly Yoav and Deganit Arazi from Sha'ar Hagolan, who not only lent an ear and offered productive commentary, but also provided me with a copy of THE HERO'S WIFE that played such a major role in chapter 11. I would also like to thank Maayan Meir for helping me structure my work schedule.

My uttermost gratitude is extended to my family for their love and support. I am grateful to my mother, Dr. Susan Hattis Rolef, on whose devoted assistance I could rely every step of the way. I am indebted to her hospitality and generosity; her creative approach to uncovering information, which made the search itself exciting; and her inexorable aid as a proof reader. I humbly thank my father Shlomo Rolef and his wife Haya Vitelson Rolef for their unconditional material and spiritual support. I would like to commend the efforts they invested providing me with invaluable research material. My obliging gratitude is also extended to my aunt Rina Hattis, who read my thesis with “a fine-tooth comb” providing me with useful commentary. I thank my sister Dr. Tom Rolef Ben-Shahar for her long-standing support and interest in my project, as well as my brother Yoav Rolef, whose challenging questions and remarks helped me expand my own perspective.
