Contents

Acknowledgments —— VII

Note on transliteration —— XIII

Bibliographic reference for the novels—— XV

Introduction —— 1

1 A laughable tradition —— 8
1.1 Literary humour —— 8
1.1.1 Definitions —— 8
1.1.2 Terminology —— 12
1.2 Humour theories —— 14
1.2.1 Phylosophical aesthetic theories: an integrated model —— 14
1.2.2 Linguistic theories and narrative humour —— 17
1.3 Arab humorous tradition —— 24
1.3.1 Jocular anecdotes —— 25
1.3.2 Maqāmāt —— 27
1.3.3 Stock characters —— 29
1.3.4 Arabian Nights —— 33
1.3.5 Shadow theatre and Ottoman karagöz —— 35
1.3.6 Satirical press —— 36
1.3.7 Contemporary literature —— 38
1.4 Egyptian political jokes —— 39
1.5 Literary and popular references —— 43

2 Masters of humour —— 45
2.1 Re-designing the canon —— 45
2.2 A canon of humour —— 48
2.3 Analytical framework —— 52
2.4 Authors in their context —— 55
2.4.1 Origins —— 55
2.4.2 Career and recognition —— 57
2.4.3 Literary influences —— 60
2.4.4 From the margins —— 62

3 Reversed epics. Nuʿmān, the village antihero — 68
3.1 Suspended form and unreliable narrator — 70
3.1.1 Village novel — 70
3.1.2 Scholarly writing — 76
3.1.3 Discoursive strategies — 80
3.2 The puppet — 82
3.2.1 A folk antihero — 82
3.2.2 Interrupted rituals — 86
3.3 Social satire: the village — 92
3.3.1 Ignorance and superstition — 92
3.3.2 Entertainment for the elite — 93
3.4 Conclusion: a tale of incongruities — 96

4 Ibn Shalabī, a (pre-)modern trickster — 98
4.1 Reviving the past — 100
4.1.1 Travelogue — 100
4.1.2 Maqāmāt across time — 104
4.1.3 Historiography — 106
4.2 The trickster — 109
4.2.1 Ibn Shalabī and his doubles — 109
4.2.2 Out of time — 113
4.2.3 Out of place — 118
4.3 Humour in the urban world — 119
4.3.1 Verbal and situational humour — 120
4.3.2 Egyptian idiosyncrasies — 121
4.3.3 Comic subversion — 123
4.4 Conclusion: a very Egyptian story — 127

5 Laughing together at the hash den — 129
5.1 Social biography of the coterie — 131
5.1.1 The hash den — 131
5.1.2 The narrator as a guide — 134
5.1.3 Aspiring intellectuals — 136
5.2 Ṣāliḥ, the wise fool — 138
5.2.1 Appearance — 138
5.2.2 Philosophy — 140
5.2.3 Intoxication and collective creativity — 142
5.2.4 Language and identity — 147
5.3 What is hēṣa? — 150

5.3.1 From pure fun to political satire — 150
5.3.2 From comedy theatre to farce — 153
5.4 Conclusion: hashish as a metaphor — 155

6 Laughing together at migration — 157
6.1 The labourers — 160
6.1.1 Constructing identity — 160
6.1.2 The city: working sites and accommodation — 162
6.1.3 Tales of labour migration — 164
6.2 Negotiating Bedouin identity — 170
6.2.1 The village: a historical reconstruction — 170
6.2.2 Tales of Bedouin migration — 172
6.3 Which community? — 176
6.4 Conclusion: new forms of nomadism — 179

7 A comparative look — 181
7.1 Narratological aspects — 181
7.1.1 Narrators — 181
7.1.2 Space and time — 184
7.1.3 Characters — 187
7.2 Intertextuality — 190
7.2.1 Literary heritage — 190
7.2.2 Historiography — 192
7.2.3 Across genres — 194
7.3 Themes and style — 195

Conclusions — 198

Bibliography — 205

Websites and videos — 227

Index — 229