Acknowledgements

The editors wish to thank all the authors for their commitment and great work, as well as for kindly accepting our suggestions. We also wish to thank all our reviewers for their valuable comments and feedback, and our two proofreaders: John Shakespear and Cristina Fernández-Hall. We would also like to acknowledge the support of some institutions that have been crucial for this research. First of all, we are grateful to the European Research Council, which finances the ERC StG project "Social Networks of the Past: Mapping Hispanic and Lusophone Literary Modernity" (grant agreement #803860), and the Global Literary Studies Research Lab (GlobaLS), both led by Diana Roig-Sanz at the IN3-Universitat Oberta de Catalunya, in Barcelona, as well as the Spanish National project "The Novel as Global Form. Poetic Challenges and Cross-border Literary Circulation" (PID2020-118610GA-I00 / AEI / 10.13039/501100011033), led by Neus Rotger as principal investigator and Marta Puxan-Oliva as Co-PI. Special thanks should also be given to our publisher, De Gruyter, and to Maxim Karagodin, Editor in Hispanic & Latin American Studies, and Gabrielle Cornefert for their valuable help and patience throughout the process. Finally, we also have to acknowledge the beautiful work made by Blanche Ellis, artist and graphic facilitator who is the author of all the illustrations communicating the concepts of space, scale, time, connectivity, and agency.
