This project began as a doctoral dissertation, completed at The Catholic University of America, Washington, DC, in 2019. I am very grateful for God's help given in the form of many people whose assistance and encouragement made this project possible. Among these, my first thanks is for my advisor Dr. Brad Gregory, whose teaching, scholarship, attentive advising, and kindness has given me an example of a true scholar and friend. I am grateful also to my readers Dr. Robert Miller II, now deceased and greatly missed, and Dr. David Bosworth.

Thanks to Dr. Ben Wright, Dr. Nuria Calduch-Benages, and Dr. Matthew Goff, who each reviewed various sections of this project, as well as to Drs. Rey and Raymond for graciously granting me permission to consult a pre-publication version of their critical edition of the Ben Sira manuscripts. I am also very grateful for the assistance of Alice Meroz at Walter de Gruyter.

I offer thanks also to my parents for their constant encouragement, which has been a characteristic not only of this project but of my whole life. No sufficient thanks can be given to my wife, Rachel. She is truly a woman of strength and wisdom, and I am very blessed to have her constant support and companionship.
