

Contents

Felicitas Kleber and Tamara Rathcke

On the nature of speech dynamics: approaches to studying synchronic variation and diachronic change — 1

Part 1: Empirical perspectives on diachronic change

Felicity Cox, Sallyanne Palethorpe and Joshua Penney

Fifty years of monophthong and diphthong shifts in Mainstream Australian English — 17

Rachel Macdonald and Jane Stuart-Smith

Coarticulation guides sound change: an acoustic-phonetic study of real-time change in word-initial /l/ over four decades of Glaswegian — 49

C. I. Watson, Z. E. Evans, E. Ballard, B. Ross and S. Cassidy

The impact of automated phonetic alignment and formant tracking workflows on sound change measurement — 89

Debbie Loakes, Janet Fletcher and Josh Clothier

One place, two speech communities: differing responses to sound change in Mainstream and Aboriginal Australian English in a small rural town — 117

Enkeleida Kapia and Felicitas Kleber

Prosodic change in 100 years: the fall of the rise-fall in an Albanian variety — 145

Part 2: Factors conditioning synchronic variation

Philip Hoole and Marianne Pouplier

Control of larynx height in vowel production revisited: a real-time MRI study — 175

Andrew Butcher and Hywel Stoakes

Sheila's roses (are in the paddick): reduced vowels in Australian English — 207

Christine Mooshammer and Malte Belz

The future of the queen: how to pronounce “König*innen” ‘gender-neutrally’ in German — 245

Haruo Kubozono

Synchronic variation and diachronic change: mora-counting and syllable-counting dialects in Japanese — 273

Markus Jochim and Felicitas Kleber

Reconstructing the timeline of a consonantal change in a German dialect: evidence from agent-based modeling — 307

Part 3: Theoretical approaches at the interface between synchronic variation and diachronic change

Georgia Zellou and Patrice Speeter Beddor

On (mis)aligned innovative perception and production norms — 343

Maria-Josep Solé

Phonological patterns and dependency relations may arise from aerodynamic factors — 369

James Kirby and Morgan Sonderegger

Actuation without production bias — 395

Tamara Rathcke, Chiara Castellano and Massimiliano Canzi

Understanding the role of broadcast media in sound change — 425

Mary E. Beckman

Connecting prosody and duality of patterning in diachrony, typology, phylogeny, and ontogeny — 453

Index — 483